Speedy Curb On Inflation Called For By Truman

Economic Report Stresses Peril In Declining U. S. Purchasing Power

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

President Truman told Congress yesterday that the Nation is running an economic fever for which medicine is needed—"needed promptly, and needed badly."

That ruddy glow on the cheeks of the national economy, he implied, is less a sign of good health than it is a hectic flush.

Mr. Truman's warning diagnosis was in his annual Economic Report to Congress, a tract on inflation, which he called "the dominant problem in our economic affairs."

Depression "Not Inevitable"

Production in 1947, he said, was "heartening." Profits were good and nothing "disrupted activity in any serious way." But the developments of the year did not include the changes needed for "permanent" prosperity and growth. In fact, they brought us "progressively into a more unstable situation."

In the course of his report, a printed 136-page booklet, Mr. Truman remarked that a depression was not inevitable. He expressed his confidence that we could surmount our difficulties and indeed have another prosperous year. He noted also that businessmen seemed to expect strong markets as far ahead as they could see.

But for the most part, the tone of his report was grave. He spoke of "ominous signs" and "the danger of a serious setback."

Drop in Purchasing Power

These were some of the storm warnings:

1. Consumers' purchasing power dropped 8 per cent in the two years 1946-47. Total spending held up high only because people reduced the amount that they usually saved, actually dipped into saving, or bought on credit. Such things cannot go on indefinitely.

2. The granting of credit expanded so rapidly in the last half year "as to cause grave concern as to its inflation effect."

3. Prices advanced to the point where consumers' income is not enough to buy all goods being currently produced. Full buying was maintained only because there were, in addition to consumers' purchases, "extraordinary"—and not permanent—factors such as huge exports, business construction and credit buying.

4. In this connection, the trend is running the wrong way. During the war, the income of the average consumer—the fellow whose buying is counted on to absorb the Nations' goods—increased. But since the middle of 1946 there has been a reversal of this "very desirable trend." Profits rose, but not the real incomes of the workers and poorer groups of the Nation.

5. Because of high prices, at

Excess Profit Tax Proposed By President

Dingell Introduces Bill to Finance $40 Individual Cut

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

A modified excess profits tax, tapping corporate earnings 3.1 billion dollars to finance $40 tax cuts for individual taxpayers was proposed by the President yesterday and introduced in the House in bill form.

The Administration bill, taxing profits of corporations 75 per cent after liberalized exemptions, was presented to the House by Representative John D. Dingell (D., Mich.).

Dingell's action followed a conference between the President and three top Democratic members of the House Ways and Means Committee.

Doughton Declines

At the White House meeting, and subsequently at a conference with House Democratic Leader Sam Rayburn (Tex.), Representative Robert L. Doughton (N. C.), ranking Ways and Means Democrat, declined to introduce the bill, it was learned.

Doughton told reporters he had not been consulted until yesterday, did not know revival of excess profits taxes was planned and thought any tax relief at this time should extend split income (community property) tax privileges to married couples in all States.

The North Carolinian said his failure to sponsor the bill did not necessarily mean he would not support it.

"I, do not know enough about it," he said.

First Notice

Sitting in on the White House and Rayburn conferences were Doughton, Dingell and Representative Jere Cooper (D., Tenn.). Dingell left the Rayburn conference to introduce what he described as "the President's bill."

It was the first formal notice that the President had the excess profits tax in mind when he recommended increased corporation taxes to offset the loss of revenue from proposed $40 cuts in individual taxes.

The wartime excess profits tax, repealed by Congress right after the war, imposed a 95 per cent tax on all corporate profits in

3000 Dignitaries Witness Elevation of Msgr. O'Boyle

By John A. Singerhoff
Post Reporter

New York, N. Y., Jan. 14.—"Receive the Holy Ghost. . . ."

With those words, the Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle was consecrated today as the first Archbishop of Washington—the spiritual leader of some 165,000 Roman Catholics in the Nation's Capital and five adjacent Maryland counties.

Garbed in the historic white and silver vestments worn by Pope Pius XII at his own consecration as a bishop, Archbishop O'Boyle was elevated by Francis Cardinal Spellman in St. Patrick's Cathedral.

More than 3000 world leaders and 50 abbots, bishops and archbishops watched the impressive ceremonies in the huge Fifth ave. edifice.

Head and Hands Anointed

Cardinal Spellman anointed the head and hands of the new archbishop with holy oils and presented him the gold crozier, symbol of his new office, intoning:

"Receive the staff of the pastoral office, so that in the correction of vices thou mayest be lovingly severe, giving judgment without wrath, softening the minds of thy hearers whilst fostering virtues, not neglecting strictness of discipline through love of tranquility."

In the cathedral were 65 friends and relatives of Archbishop O'Boyle from Scranton and Dunmore, Pa. Among them were his aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Muldoon; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Parks, and an aunt by marriage, Mrs. Mary Muldoon.

Present in the audience were Myron C. Taylor, President Truman's special representative to the Vatican; New York's Mayor William O'Dwyer, former Postmaster General James A. Farley and former Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, and John J. McKeon of Washington.

Present also were representatives of the Protestant, Jewish and Catholic organizations with which Archbishop O'Boyle worked as head of the Catholic War Relief Services and later as executive director of the New York Catholic Charities.

At 51, the son of Michael and Mary Muldoon O'Boyle of Scranton, became one of the youngest archbishops in the Nation. He was ordained a priest 27 years ago.

Ceremony of consecration which began at 9:30 a. m. with a procession of more than 500 members of the hierarchy, priests, members of religious orders and seminaries, lasted nearly four hours.

Archbishop O'Boyle, who expects to leave New York for Washington at 11:30 a. m. next Tuesday, was honored by all members of the clergy at a reception after his consecration. He spent the rest of the day with his relatives and in seclusion at the Cardinal's Palace adjacent to St. Patrick's. Before taking up the reins of his new see Archbishop O'Boyle will be busy terminating his affairs with New York Catholic Charities which he has directed since last March.

Elevation of the new bishop took place at a solemn pontifical mass, a Roman Catholic ritual which has not changed for centuries. Cardinal Spellman and Msgr. O'Boyle celebrated the mass jointly, partaking of a single host and sharing the same chalice at communion.

Dignitaries Take Part

Beginning the colorful rite was the 40-minute-long procession, led by a crossbearer flanked by two acolytes. Next in line were seminarians, students for the priesthood, brothers of religious orders, priests, monsignori, three abbots, four archbishops and 43 bishops.

Next came papal chamberlains and knights, including Gen. William J. Donovan, wartime chief of the Office of Strategic Services; G. Howland Shaw, former Assistant Secretary of State and president of the welfare council of New York, and James E. Markham, 7609 Morningside dr. nw., Washington, a papal knight of Malta.

Figures Are Not Final

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

Great Britain will need the lion's share of American help to Europe under the Marshall Plan, Congress was told yesterday in a series of country-by-country studies submitted by the executive agencies of the Government.

British needs from the Western Hemisphere were estimated tentatively at $2,180,000,000 in the 15 months ending June 30 next year. France and her dependencies came next with an estimate of $1,563,000,000, western Germany next with $1,007,000,000, and Italy next with $977,000,000.

The actual requirements may be even higher, for the present figures did not reflect the 7½ per cent rise in the prices of imports from the United States since last July or the 5 per cent rise in the prices of imports from elsewhere in the hemisphere.

Nor did the figures indicate precisely how much of each country's requirements would have to be paid for out of the United States Treasury. The present estimates included needs that would also be met, in part, by the World Bank, by other Western Hemisphere countries and by private investors.

The reports commented frankly

General Tax Boosts Asked By Gov. Tuck

General Assembly Message, However, Excludes Higher Levy on Property

Special to The Washington Post

Richmond, Va., Jan. 14.—Gov. William M. Tuck today greeted the 1948 General Assembly of Virginia with proposals to increase virtually every State tax save property tax rates.

He flatly opposed imposition of a State sales tax "except as a last resort."

And he firmly urged extension of the Virginia Rent Control Act for another two years, in view of "continued uncertainties as to future Federal policy."

The Governor's message to the Assembly carried with it a request for $21,700,000 in additional revenues beyond budget estimates for the 1948-50 biennium—a sum which he said could be raised by increasing rates on present taxes.

Heavy Program Indicated

He reserved until next Monday the exact total and a breakdown of his budget recommendations when his budget message will go to the legislators, but the inference was made plain that the overall total of appropriations for the two-year period, 1948-50, would be in the neighborhood of a half billion dollars.

In a message packed with proposals that boded plenty of heavy work for the lawmakers, Tuck also recommended:

1. An additional $7,500,000 beyond the extra increases of the special session of 1947 for public schools, with a provision for an average teacher pay increase of $150.

2. An increase of $1,160,000 in public welfare appropriations from the general fund.

3. A boost in maximum unemployment compensation benefits from $15 to $20 weekly.

4. Major increases in appropriations for tuberculosis control and mental hospitals.

Views Expressed Strongly

The Governor expressed his views strongly on such debate-making subjects as teacher salaries, State aid to localities and higher public welfare appropriations.

On taxing matters, he urged increasing:

Present individual income taxing rates of 1½ per cent on first $3000 of net income, 2½ per cent of next $2000 and 3 per cent of excess above $5000 to 2, 3 and 5 per cent in the respective brackets. In comparison to other States, the Governor said, his suggested rates "still would be regarded as altogether reasonable."

Present Virginia corporation income tax of 3 per cent to 5 per cent.

Present retailers, wholesalers and restaurant operators' license tax of 13 cents per $100 business volume to 20 cents.

Other Tax Proposals

Other tax increases would be on public service corporations a 1½ per cent increase in present rates; an increase of 12 to 15 cents per $100 in the tax on deeds recorded; an excise tax on beer to a straight 2 cents on a 12-ounce bottle, instead of the present 1 cent and 1½-cent rate, and $3.10 on a 31-gallon barrel instead of the present $2.75.

"The needed additional revenue should be raised by increasing the rates of the taxes which now are measured by net income, gross income, gross receipts, or volume. This approach should not involve increasing property tax rates."

The biggest share of the Governor's requested additional funds—about $7,500,000—would go to

Deputy Slate Of Non-Reds Picked in Paris

Paris, Jan. 14 (AP).—Non-Communist deputies elected their own list of National Assembly officers tonight in a move to forestall the possibility of the Communists gaining control of a provisional French government during national elections.

Ending a 24-hour deadlock in the Assembly, the non-Communist majority elected Socialist Max le Jeune first vice president. The deadlock began yesterday when the Communists insisted that their legislative leader, Jacques Duclos, be reelected to the post.

The first vice presidency currently is a key post because Assembly President Edouard Herriot, radical Socialist, is ailing. In the event of the 76-year-old Herriot's death or inability to preside, the first vice president would take over his duties. If the Assembly were dissolved by a call for national elections, the presiding officer of the Assembly would head the provisional government.

The non-Communist vote was taken tonight after the Communists had left the chamber.

Despite the Communists' absence, the Assembly elected a slate of officers which included Duclos as third vice president and Mme. Madeleine Braun, also a Communist, as fourth vice president.

Duclos immediately announced the Communists would not take the posts.

Chief Murphy Gets Surprise Assist at Trial

Prosecution Witness Admits Rotation Plan Didn't Hurt Efficiency

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

A battalion chief testified yesterday that while Fire Chief Clement Murphy's program of rotating personnel lowered efficiency and morale, it did not impair actual firefighting.

This opinion of a prosecution witness, Battalion Chief Harold F. Harding, on what was termed the "crux" of the charges in the trial of Murphy, seemed a complete surprise to both prosecution and defense.

Apparently a major blow to charges that the fire chief has "demoralized" his department, Harding's testimony was introduced after almost three hours of legal wrangling over whether his opinions could be submitted.

Defense Attorney Martin F. O'Donoghue, who had vigorously objected to introduction of the opinion, insisting on examples of actual inefficiency, was noticably startled by the testimony's sharp turn in his favor.

Neither O'Donoghue nor Special Assistant Corporation Counsel Daniel B. Maher, the prosecuting attorney, would comment publicly on this development.

O'Donoghue said later, however, that he had no intention of making a request to dismiss the charges upon completion of the prosecution's case.

"We're going to see this through to the end," he said. Pointing to Murphy, O'Donoghue added, "I'm going to clear this man completely."

Yesterday's proceedings before the three-man civilian trial board, headed by Austin F. Canfield, were devoted entirely to the Fire Department's rotation program.

The specifications, last of 10 counts against Murphy, which included charges of abusive language and intoxication, stated:

"That the said Murphy, shortly after he assumed the position of Chief Engineer, embarked upon a program of rotation of personnel by removing large numbers of experienced personnel from units within a short period of time, and replacing them with men inexperienced in the particular district served and inexperienced with the apparatus and the conditions in the companies to which they have

U. S. Plans To Reopen Big Air Base In Libya

London, Jan. 14 (U.P.).—The United States Air Force announced today that it is reopening its big wartime base near Tripoli, Libya, 800 miles from Central Italy and the battlegrounds of Greece.

European United States Air Force headquarters at Wiesbaden, Germany, said that Lieut. Gen. Curtis LeMay, Air Force chief in Europe flew to North Africa two days ago for an inspection of Mellaha airfield.

Mellaha air base will be used to service planes en route from the United States to the Middle East, it said.

A foreign office spokesman said that the United States had asked the British if there would be any objection to reopening the field and that Britain had granted permission to reestablish it "on a temporary basis."

Britain pointed out that the future of Libya "is subject to decision by the Council of Foreign Ministers."

Under terms of the Italian peace treaty, the Big Four must settle the future of Libya before September 15 or the issue goes before the United Nations General Assembly.

It was recalled here that Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov surprised the Western powers at the first meeting of the Council of Foreign Ministers by making a bid for Soviet trusteeship over Libya.

[In Washington, Secretary of Defense Forrestal said the field was "not an air base in the military sense" but a "way station on a trunk line to Athens."—Editor's note.]

Britain to Send Troops to Cyprus

London, Jan. 14 (AP). — Britain disclosed today that "large" numbers of the 70,000 British troops in Palestine will move to Cypress soon to make the island a key point in Britain's eastern Mediterranean defense system.

London diplomatic circles saw the British move and the announcement of the reopening of the American airbase in Libya as important factors in the East-West "propaganda war" in the Mediterranean.

Cyprus, about 40 miles from the south coast of Turkey, is being used now to lodge Jewish immigrants who fought to enter Palestine without certificates. Malta, Britain's bastion in the central Mediterranean, flanks Greece and the Dardanelles on the west. Cyprus forms a flank on the east.

Lovett Cites Delays To Berlin Supply Trains

Emphasizing the United States forces intended to stay in Berlin, Undersecretary of State Robert A. Lovett said yesterday that six or seven supply trains had been delayed en route to the German capital.

The trains must go through Russian-occupied territory to reach Berlin, which is entirely surrounded by Soviet forces. The departure point was Frankfurt.

Lovett also cited a number of other incidents in the Berlin area, including the shooting attack on an American officer and his wife who were on their way to Berlin. Maj. Richard R. Baker, jr., of 115 S. St. Aspath st., Alexandria, was wounded in the hand when fired upon Sunday by a trigger-happy Russian border guard.

When asked directly, Lovett conceded that he had no evidence that these incidents formed a pattern or paralleled a Soviet newspaper's hint that the Western Allies abandon Berlin to the Russians.

He said the United States has no intention of getting out, regardless of how difficult the Soviets may make it for them.

Lovett also told his news conference that the United States has not yet replied to the French protest about Anglo-American plans to set up a new economic administration in western Germany. He did say that Anglo-American talks

Women Fail to Identify Veteran

Maj. Barrett Would Commend Officer for Arresting Clegg

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendant of police, yesterday declared that Pvt. John G. Gibboney should be commended for having arrested Julius Willie Clegg last August.

"I feel Officer Gibboney did his job, and if he didn't do it, I'd charge him with neglect of duty," the police chief testified before a trial board considering charges against Private Gibboney, Det. Sergt. Elex K. Kapsol and Special Investigator David S. Ennis. They are accused of unjustifiably arresting, illegally detaining and beating Clegg.

"He (Gibboney) should be commended," Superintendent Barrett stated. "I would have done the same thing." The police chief characterized Kapsol and Ennis as "two of the finest men on the force."

The three-man trial board hearing the charges is composed of two police officials subordinate to the chief, Inspector Clement P. Cox and Capt. Albert I. Bullock and James O'D. Moran, member of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board. The trial board charges technically were brought in Barrett's name, although he opposed the action before the Commissioners.

The chief's strong testimonial on behalf of the arresting policeman came after two women who had complained of being molested in the vicinity of 13th and F sts. nw. failed to identify Clegg as their accoster.

Clegg, a 26-year-old Negro veteran, who lives at 1106 21st st. ne., was arrested at 6 a. m. on August 2 at the corner of 13th and E sts. nw. on suspicion of being the molester, and allegedly held for 34 hours incommunicado. He was then released without charge.

The arrest was made by Private Gibboney after Clegg had crossed over to the west side of 13th st., near the corner of E, and by his approach frightened Mrs. Viola Haynes, 19, of 1706 F st. nw. Mrs. Haynes was reporting to work as a waitress at Ceres Restaurant, 1309 E st. nw. Clegg has testified he was returning from lunch to his job at The Washington Post, 1337 E st. nw.

Mrs. Haynes testified yesterday that she was scared when Clegg approached behind her, but she did not hear him say anything nor see him do anything. When Clegg was brought in before the witness, and the frail waitress was asked if Clegg looked like the man who had followed her and made indecent motions four days before, Mrs. Haynes replied: "No, he doesn't."

A similar negative responsive was given by Mrs. Ethel Click Owens, of 150 12th st. ne., also a Ceres waitress, who had been accosted four days before.

Major Barrett told the board that he had investigated the Clegg complaint earlier, and had made

Laughlin Arranged It, She Says

Mrs. Hobbs Testifies Peckham Performed Abortion on Her

By Howard L. Dutkin
Post Reporter

Mrs. Esther Pickard Hobbs, 23-year-old former girl friend of James J. Laughlin, Washington attorney, yesterday put the finger on Dr. Henry L. Peckham as the doctor who performed an abortion on her last March.

The attractive former Government girl also testified that the attorney had told her he had provided $300 for the operation.

This testimony in District Court together with the reading to the jury of a number of sizzling love missives received by her and signed with the hand-printed signature "Jim" highlighted yesterday's proceedings. Peckham and Laughlin are jointly charged with abortion.

Another Government witness, Eugene E. Huppenbauer, auditor for the Roosevelt Hotel, New Orleans, produced records to show that a "J. J. Laughlin" and "wife" registered there from Washington, D. C., for a double room December 28, 1946, and had checked out January 2, 1947.

One of the letters, read to the jury by Prosecutor Charles Murray, dated September 3, 1946, said in part:

Federal Grain Expert Tells Of Quick Loss in Wheat 'Flier'

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

A congressional adviser and expert on the world's grain needs told Congress yesterday how easy it is to lose money speculating in grain.

Dr. John Kerr Rose, a Ph.D. employed in the Library of Congress, who helped prepare the Herter Foreign Aid Committee's report on "Grain Availability and Requirements," was called by the Senate Appropriations subcommittee, investigating market speculation by Government insiders, yesterday.

Rose told the committee that he took a "flier" in wheat last September 20. He bought and sold 1000 bushels that day, and lost $35 in "a few hours."

Rose's testimony interrupted a planned investigation by the subcommittee into the accounts of ohe of the members of the Senate Committee, Senator Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.)

The committee had planned to probe Senator Thomas' brokerage accounts, and to delve into the dealings in cotton by Mrs. Edith Thomas, revealed last week as "long" 300 bales of cotton on October 15, 1946.

Thomas had asked the committee to review both his operations and those of Mrs. Thomas. That investigation is scheduled to be undertaken today.

In all, Rose told the committee, he had dabbled in wheat and oats

Freezing Day Forecast With Low of 15

A low temperature early today of about 15 degrees was forecast for the District by the weather bureau.

"Fair and considerably colder" was the rest of the forecast for early morning. Later in the day, the weatherman saw the temperature rising slowly to the freezing point.

The District chill was part of a cold wave which hit from the Rocky Mountains to the Appalachians. International Falls, Minn., had a low of 30 degrees below zero. It was 22 below at Duluth, Minn. The cold weather extended to the South, where New Orleans had freezing temperatures, and it was 24 at Asheville, N. C. Snow fell in northern Alabama and parts of Tennessee.

Freezing weather was predicted for the Gulf Coast and northern Florida and parts of Texas.

Clark Authorizes Probe Into Lobbies

Aide Given Power To Take Any Cases Before Grand Jury

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Attorney General Clark authorized Federal grand jury investigation yesterday of alleged violations of the 1946 law requiring lobbyists to register and declare who pays them.

Irving R. Kaufman, special assistant to the Attorney General, was given powers of a district attorney to take such cases before a grand jury. He has been making an inquiry into compliance with the act.

The authorization did not specify when action should be taken or whether a regular or special grand jury would receive Kaufman's evidence. At the Department of Justice it was explained that the move merely gave Kaufman authority to go before a grand jury where he deemed it necessary.

One effect of such action would be to bring to light by subpena documents and other papers which the course of investigation has otherwise failed to uncover.

Clark's letter of authorization said Kaufman might act "in connection with the investigation and prosecution of alleged violations of the Lobby Act and other statutes of the United States by certain persons, firms, committees, corporations, associations, and their members, and other organizations or groups of persons."

Clark explained that the "principle objective" of yesterday's action was to "obtain compliance" with the 1946 act which went into effect August 2 of that year. He pointed out that approximately 950 individual lobbyists had registered.

"However", he added, "only a little over 200 organizations or associations employing lobbyists have filed the financial statements of receipts and expenditures required under Section 305 of the act. This failure of organizations to file financial reports is defeating one of the main purposes of the law."

Clark went on to say that statements of individual lobbyists reporting their incomes did not always contain all the financial information required by the act. This was true, he said, "because most of the money allegedly spent to influence legislation is not spent by individuals but by organizations they are employed by."

Medical Chief

Magnuson Succeeds Hawley at VA

Dr. Paul B. Magnuson yesterday was appointed medical chief of the Veterans' Administration.

Veterans' Administrator Carl R. Gray named Magnuson to succeed Dr. Paul R. Hawley, who resigned January 1.

Dr. Magnuson

Magnuson, a native of St. Paul, Minn., and a former Chicago surgeon, has been second in command in veterans medical services, under Hawley. He was professor of surgery at Northwestern University Medical School before joining the VA in January, 1945.

Gray said that Magnuson, working with Hawley, "played a large role in affiliating more than half of VA's 126 hospitals with Class A medical schools over the country and in establishment of VA's residency rtaining program."

Magnuson has been the Veterans Administration's acting chief of professional services since last September. Gray said Hawley, as special assistant and adviser to the VA, will continue to assist in carrying out the medical program.

Magnuson took his premedical training at the University of Minnesota and graduated from the University of Pennsylvania Medical School in 1908.

Excess Profit Tax Proposed

excess of average earnings in the prewar (1935 to 1939) base period. Ten per cent of the wartime tax was returnable to corporations as a postwar credit.

Yesterday's Administration proposal allows corporations to retain 135 per cent of their base period earnings, plus an added exemption of $50,000. The latter is designed to free small corporations from the special levy.

The Treasury figures it will fall just short (by 100 million dollars) of yielding the 3.2-billion-dollar estimated cost of $40 tax credits for individual taxpayers and their dependents.

Dingell told the House the modified excess profits tax will affect "only a relatively small number of corporations"—probably less than 22,000 of the 360,000 corporations which paid taxes this year. He said the 22,000 hit "are making large excess profits during this period of inflationary pressures."

"As the President said in his (State of the Union) message, this is no time for a general tax reduction," said Dingell. "The cost of living credit provided by this bill has been made necessary by the steady increase in the level of consumers' prices—32 per cent since the $500 per capita exemption was first set in May, 1944.

"The benefits of the ($40) credit would go almost entirely where it is most needed; 92 per cent of it would go to persons with incomes under $5000 a year. It would take 10,300,000 taxpayers with low net incomes off the tax rolls entirely. These persons have little if any means to pay taxes, except at the expense of their health and that of their dependents.

"To reimburse the Treasury for the cost of this necessary relief to the small taxpayer, the bill provides for the reimposition of a reasonable excess profits tax. . . . The corporations which would be subject to this tax are the ones making large profits and can afford to pay it."

Contrasting the President's proposal with the GOP's Knutson general tax reduction bill, Dingell charged the Knutson measure gives "less relief at the lowest income levels, where it is needed most, yet would drastically reduce Federal revenue and so force up living costs still further."

He said Mr. Truman's proposal relieves the pressure of rising prices on the needy "yet it does not add to the forces making for further increases in these costs."

Treasury Secretary John Snyder will submit to questioning on the plan at Ways and Means Committee hearings starting tomorrow and continuing next week. Republicans claim the votes to kill it "dead as a mackerel" in committee and report out instead the 5.6-billion-dollar Knutson measure. House leaders have predicted House passage of a general tax reduction measure January 29 or 30.

Doughton's Attitude

Receiving reporters after Dingell's introduction of the President's bill, Representative Doughton said he thought repeal of the wartime excess profits tax was "premature" when Congress voted it more than two years ago. He said the House voted merely to cut it in half but the Senate voted repeal "on the recommendation of the Secretary of the Treasury."

"To reimpose it again, after it has been repealed for 2½ years, is going to require a lot of looking into by me," said the former Ways and Means chairman, who has differed on many another Administration tax proposal.

Doughton said said he had hoped for a cut in taxes "all along the line" and repeal of the "more burdensome excise taxes.

Asked if he had received any "encouragement" from the Administration on his own bill to split income of husbands and wives for tax purposes, he replied with a flat "no."

on the grain exchanges about a dozen times last year. The net result of his transactions was a loss of $1744.75.

Rose said he owns a farm in Illinois. He has been employed by the Library of Congress since October 1, 1946. The only "inside information" he said, that was available to him, was advance reports on crop estimates and food purchasing programs, available to any newspaper reader.

Rose said he had been interested in grain markets since 1934.

"I am an Illinois farmer," he said, "so naturally I am interested in grain. I have done nothing illegal or unethical."

Petrillo Wins Lea Act Case On Legal Point

Chicago, Jan. 14 (AP).—James C. Petrillo won his fight today to escape conviction under the Lea Act which Congress passed to trim his powers, and declared the way now is cleared to seek additional broadcasting jobs for his 225,000 union musicians.

Federal Judge J. Walter La Buy ruled the Government failed to prove its charge that Petrillo attempted, in violation of the act, to coerce radio station WAAF, Chicago, to hire more workers than it needed. Judge La Buy conducted the trial without a jury.

Petrillo called three of the station's record librarians out on strike on May 28, 1946, after the station rejected his demand that three additional librarians be hired.

Petrillo Jubilant at Verdict

This was not coercion, the court held, because "nothing contained in the letters and telegrams between the defendant and the representatives of the station disclosed to the defendant the lack of need for additional employes as a reason for rejecting the defendant's demands." Neither did the evidence show Petrillo was told of this, the decision added.

Petrillo, who received the judge's verdict with a jubilant smile, said to newsmen:

"I guess this puts a different light on the situation. The broadcasters have been telling me I cannot force them to hire more musicians than are needed. Now I can ask for additional musicians as long as they perform actual services."

Considers Lea Act Dead

Petrillo's lawyer, Daniel Carmell, said, "The essence of this decision is that the Lea Act is dead. If a union, in good faith, asks a station to install live musicians, such a request is valid and the union may strike, if necessary."

Legislators Would Curb Petrillo 'Dictatorship'

By The Associated Press

Two Congress members proposed "decisive steps" yesterday to curb what they termed the dictatorial methods of James C. Petrillo, with Representative Hoffman (R., Mich) suggesting a Federal law making it a criminal offense to interfere with radio broadcasts.

Representative Barden (D., N. C.), following up Hoffman's proposal at a House Labor Committee hearing, declared:

"Congress must take the anti-trust law principles and see if we can't make Petrillo line up and walk with the rest of the Nation.

The committee is investigating charges that Petrillo, through the Amercian Federation of Musicians which he heads, exercises a monopoly over the Nation's commercial music.

Barden's bitter criticism of the Chicago union leader came as Leonard L. Asch, president of the Capitol Broadcasting Co. of Schenectady, N. Y., testified that Petrillo has "set up a dictatorship" and will not permit his musicians to decide for themselves "whether they will work or starve."

J. N. Bailey, executive director of the newly organized FM Association, testified that a half-billion dollar industry is threatened with disruption through Petrillo's refusal to permit duplication of musical programs on FM and standard broadcast stations without hiring separate musicians. He told the committee that the fledgling FM system is "being used as a football" in negotiations between Petrillo and the major radio networks.

Prelates Meet at Washington Archbishop's Consecration

The Washington Post

con and subdeacon, assistant priest, the archbishop-designate, Monsignor O'Boyle; the assistant consecretors, Bishops John M. McNamara, pastor of St. Gabriel's Church, Washington, and Henry T. Klonowski, auxiliary bishop of Scranton. The latter is a college clsasmate and close friend of the new archbishop.

Next in line was Cardinal Spellman, his attendants and the bearers of other implements of the service.

Stops for Prayer

The procession was delayed for a few minutes when the Archbishop-elect stopped at the Chapel of the Sacred Heart, dropped on his knees for a few moments of silent prayer before proceeding.

Cardinal Spellman, wearing the brilliant red watered silk ermine-trimmed garments of his office, went directly to the main altar to ves for mass. Msgr. O'Boyle went to a small chapel on the Gospel, or left hand, side of the altar with the two consecrator bishops. After he, too, prepared himself, he proceeded to the main altar, facing Cardinal Spellman.

Then, according to Roman law, Cardinal Spellman called for the proclamtion of Pope Pius XII, elevating O'Boyle. Thils was read and was followed by an examination of the elected, a profession of faith, the oath of office.

During this time two choirs chanted liturgical hymns and the sanctuary was aglow with the brilliance of the purples and reds of the vestments of the archbishops, bishops and monesignori who flanked the altar.

Investment With Cross

After the professions, Cardinal Spellman began the mass for the feast of St. Hilary, in the usual manner with the confiteor. Then the new bishop went to his chapel, where he was invested with the bishop's cross.

Then followed the portions of the mass known as the introit, the kyrie and the gloria, the epistle and the gospel after which Cardinal Spellman said in Latin, the language of the mass:

"A bishop judges, interprets, consecrates, ordains, offers, baptizes and confirms."

The bishop-elect, after the cardinal offered a prayer in his behalf, prostrated himself on silken cushions on the altar steps. He remained so for nearly five minutes while the Litany of the saints was being chanted.

Then Cardinal Spellman placed his hands on the head of Monsignor O'Boyle, anointed his head with holy oil in the sign of the cross, saying:

"May thy head be anointed and consecrated by heavenly benediction in the pontificial order, in the name of the Father, and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost."

There were continued prayers during which the new bishop's pastoral staff (similar to a shepherd's crooked staff) and ring were blessed.

During this time Monsignor O'Boyle had resting against the back of his head and neck, the open Mass Missal, significant of the weight of God's word on his shoulders.

At the completion of this ritual, Bishop O'Boyle was instructed by Cardinal Spellman to:

"Receive the Gospel and go preach to the people committed to thee, for God is powerful to increase His grace in thee, who liveth and reigneth, world without end."

Mass Continues

The Most Rev. Bryan J. McEntegart, Bishop of Ogdensburg, N. Y., preached the sermon.

He spoke of Archbishop O'Boyle as a "new-cut column" supporting God's cathedral, and said:

"This new shepherd, chosen by Our Holy Father for the See of Washington has been through all his priestly years an agent of the mercy of God and the brotherhood of man.

"Under the apostolic guidance of our beloved cardinal, his heart and his talents have been devoted without stint to the care of the orphaned, the sick and the unfortunate. Deeply branded on his sould is the anguish of the victims of war.

"Today as we rejoice here in his elevation, many prelates, priests, and people in distant lands join with us because they know that under his compassionate leadership vast relief supplies were gathered and then distributed throughout the world to save multitudes from disaster, despair and death.

"Today, Archbishop O'Boyle, this solemn consecration lifts you up to be a pillar of God's Church, a minister of Christ and a shepherd of his flock. Together with all your friends at home, abroad and in Heaven above, we pray that God will make you a pillar of great stregth, a minister, ever loyal to your Divine Master and a shepherd at once loving and beloved. May you continue to be in th future as in the past, God's beneficiary and man's benefactor—a good and faithful servant of your country, your church and your God."

At the end of mass, Archbishop O'Boyle blessed first his uncle, Stephen Muldoon. He then walked down the aisles of St. Patrick's blessing the faithful. The ceremoney ended with a recession, the reverse of the opening procession.

Archbishop O'Boyle attended grade, high school and college at Scranton, Pa. He was ordained a priest from St. Joseph's Seminary, Yonkers, N. Y., May 21, 1921. After five years as a parish priest he was appointed director of the Catholic Guardian Society, New York, a post in which he served until 1931. In the meantime he was graduated from the New York School of Social Work and was appointed director of the mission of the Immaculate Virgin, the largest child-caring home in the United States.

Beginning in 1933 he directed the war relief services of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, a post he held until he was made director of New York Catholic Charities in 1946.

The governments of France, Italy and Poland decorated him for his relief service to their countries during the war.

Greater Washington clergy present at the ceremonies included Rt. Rev. Patrick J. McCormick, rector of Catholic University who served as assistant priest to the Archbishop; Rt. Rev. John K. Cartwright, rector of St. Matthews Cathedral, a deacon of honor and Rt. Rev. John J. Russell, rector of St. Patricks, a special chaplain to Cardinal Spellman.

Dissolution of GSI Asked In Petition to Justice Dept.

A petition seeking dissolution of Government Services, Inc., operator of 42 struck cafeterias, was filed yesterday with Attorney General Tom C. Clark and U. S. Attorney George M. Fay.

It was represented in behalf of the same three Government employes who filed a suit in District Court Tuesday to prevent continued operation of the eating places of GSI.

The petitions contend GSI is not living up to its contract with the Government and with its certificate of incorporation. They were filed in behalf of Roy M. Patterson, 6132 N. 12th st., Arlington, Allan Searle, 1343 Saratoga ave. ne., and Ralph Russell, 15 W. Washington st., Kensington, Md.

To substantiate its allegation that GSI "is engaging in activities beyond and contrary to its certificate of incorporation," the petition to the Department of Justice referred to a recent report of a Senate Subcommittee investigating GSI. The report showed, according to the petition, that GSI had conducted activities out of keeping with its role as a nonprofit, benevolent corporation.

Elsewhere yesterday, little activity marked the tenth day of picketing by more than 1000 members of Local 471, United Cafeteria and Restaurant Workers (UPW-CIO).

Krug and Harriman Ask Price Controls

Interior Secretary Also Sees Selective Rationing Need, Continued Oil Shortage

Two Cabinet members told Congress yesterday that if they had the power, they would fix ceiling prices at once on coal, oil, gasoline, steel, lumber, farm machinery and textiles.

The Administration officials were Secretary of Interior Krug and Secretary of Commerce Harriman. Both testified before the Senate Banking Committee in favor of a bill which would grant authority for selective price controls.

If the bill is enacted, Krug said, he would immediately freeze retail and wholesale prices for coal, gasoline and other petroleum products. Furthermore, he said, if Congress passed another bill granting authority to allocate commodities, he would "possibly" ration fuel oil and gasoline.

The oil shortage, he warned, will be as bad next winter as it is this winter.

Harriman made it clear that he wanted powers to use at once, and would move immediately on the gray market in steel, on the skyrocketing prices of lumber, on cotton textiles and farm equipment.

Earlier Administration witnesses, testifying during the special session, were vague about where or when they would use hte control powers. Some spoke of wanting only "standby" authority, to be applied "if needed."

Both Krug and Harriman implied action was needed at once.

Also, both argued that the price control bill alone was not enough. They said the program would work best if it was coupled with allocations—the directed channeling of scarce supplies to various users—and limitations—restrictions on the amount of any item which a given classification of users may have.

The two men also opposed a bill pending before the committee, introduced by Senator Capehart (R., Ind.). It would apply a general freeze of the prices of all commodities at once.

Such a freeze would be "too sweeping . . . unnecessary," Harriman said. He claimed it would be unenforceable, and made no provision to correct the "inevitable" unfairnesses that would be caused by its application.

Curbs Asked On Inflation

the end of 1947 "there was a continuing prospect of a fruitless and dangerous spiraling of prices and wages."

6. Business inventories have been built up, in expectation of further price rises. Their liquidation—dumping—in case of a fall in prices, "raises a greater potential threat to the maintenance of production and employment than has been the case at any time since the war began."

7. Construction activity was high in 1947, but the high prices raise the question of whether the present rate can be sustained, especially in home building.

8. Besides the menacing rise in commercial credit, there has been an increase of mortgage debt. In fact, mortgage indebtedness in the past two years rose faster than construction expenditures on new housing.

Again and again, the President returned to his basic theme and worry: real income declined, especially for Government workers, teachers and the white-collar class generally, and there is not enough purchasing power to absorb the Nation's products once abnormal factors—business retooling, exports, extension of credit—subside.

Yet at the same time, these factors, especially the buying on credit, by individual consumers and business, are driving prices up, and making the inflation worse.

The remedy, the President said, was partly in voluntary restraint: buyers holding off from purchases they don't need, and sellers keeping prices down. But mostly, he saw the solution in the 10-point program he presented to the special session of Congress.

Three of the points have been granted him, he noted, but they are "insufficient." The other seven are needed.

The President listed three main objectives for 1948.

The first was the halting of the inflationary trend. Almost half of the report was devoted to an analysis of the trend, its causes and the Administration's proposed remedies.

The second objective listed was the maintenance of high production and employment and the adjustment of the price-income disparity without causing a sharp recession. The goals set were an increase of the total output of goods and services of 3 per cent above 1947, and an increase of about 700,000 jobs—the usual flow of newcomers to the labor force.

The third objective was the establishment of foundations "for long-range growth and prosperity . . . in the years ahead."

A large portion of the report was devoted to discussion of this third goal. It was an expansion of the points Mr. Truman urged in his State of the Union message. He called for soil conservation, flood control and expanded power programs.

He asked for expansion, mostly financed by business, of capacity to produce steel, petroleum, coke and electricity. He said that in 10 years almost half of our highways leading into cities need to be rebuilt, and that huge efforts must be made in rebuilding cities and providing more housing.

His farm production goal was an increase of 10 per cent in the next 10 years. For total national output, the target was set at a 35 per cent increase in the next decade, with 64 million jobs, or six million more than at present.

The President called for increased Federal aid to education, comprehensive health and sickness insurance programs, and increased benefits and broader coverage for unemployment and old-age insurance.

The report took space to answer the hostile comment of Congressmen when this program was submitted in the State of the Union message. GOP legislators argued then that the program would cost anywhere from 10 to 50 billion dollars more a year, making inflation so much worse.

In answer, the Chief Executive yesterday presented a schedule of timing. Parts of the larger social security program will be deflationary at the outset, he said, and so there is no reason to delay them.

But he made it clear that the rest of the social security program, resources development, transportation improvement, urban rehabilitation, and expansion of the health and education programs should not be undertaken until "the inflationary pressure subsides."

Certain other goals, even though they may be inflationary to a greater or less degree, must nevertheless be undertaken now, because other—larger—considerations demand it, the report argued.

These include raising the minimum wage and granting a $40 individual tax exemption, to lessen the hardship on those hardest hit by the present high costs.

Also, the President agreed that the European Recovery Program would intensify inflationary forces, or at least "contribute to the necessity of anti-inflationary methods." But it had to be undertaken he said, for reasons of national security and foreign policy.

In restating his demand for anti-inflation legislation, Mr. Truman stressed the importance of bank credit as an element leading to high prices. His warning was repeated and detailed. No measure to curb inflation, he said, was potentially more powerful than restricting bank credit.

But, remarkably, he did not state how it should be done. Nor did he contribute anything likely to settle the controversy over method that exists between Chairman Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board and Secretary of the Treasury Snyder.

Eccles proposed the setting up of a "special reserve" requirement which he said would tend to stop banks from making more and larger loans. Snyder opposes the idea and has been lending moral support to bankers who have proposed a voluntary restraint on themselves.

Mr. Truman's report did not arbitrate the dispute. After warning of the perils and asking a remedy, the President merely said that Congress should give Eccles' proposal "close study." And in the next sentence, he gave a pat on the back to the bankers' voluntary scheme and said that if it worked, "further general action might not be required."

Woman Injured by Street Car...

OFF TO HOSPITAL—A woman identified as Virginia Alford, 25, of 1730 Massachusetts ave. nw., is placed on a stretcher for removal to Emergency Hospital after being injured yesterday at Pennsylvania and East Executive aves. nw. A police Accident Investigation Unit report says she was struck by a streetcar as she was crossing Pennsylvania ave.

A woman pedestrian was seriously injured shortly after noon yesterday when she was struck by a streetcar while crossing Pennsylvania ave. nw. at East Executive ave.

The injured woman, Virginia Alford, 25, 1730 Massachusetts ave. nw., was admitted to Emergency Hospital with a fractured skull and scalp lacerations.

Operator of the streetcar, police said, was William Hudwell, 26, Falls Church, Va.

In a two-car collision at 7th and B sts. ne., at 3:30 p. m. Annie Schlorb, 63, 1402 1st st. sw., received possible injuries. She was admitted to Casualty Hospital where her condtition was said to be not serious.

She was a passenger in an automobile driven by George L. Frye, 59, RFD No. 4, Alexandria, which collided with anothed driven by Mrs. Catherine R. Glasgow, 27, 4609 27th st, Mount Rainier, Md.

Frye received an injury to his left haind, but refused treatment, police said. Mrs. Glasgow was treated at Casualty for bruises to the left knee.

James H. Elliott, 25, 4546 Overlook ave. sw., escaped serious injury about 2 a. m. when his car crashed into two telephone poles after skidding on an icy patch on S. Capitol st. near Nichols ave.

Elliott was treated at Gallinger Hospital for a dislocated right shoulder, rib injuries and forehead lacerations. He refused further hospitalization, police said.

'Gray Market' Charge Denied By N. Y. Dealer

By The Associated Press

Isadore Ginsberg of New York, called a "gray market" building material operator by Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.), yesterday denied this accusation and challenged the right of a congressional committee to demand the names of his customers.

Ginsberg told the House-Senator Housing Committee that he would take the risk of prosecution for contempt of Congress rather than disclose the names of persons with whom he does business.

McCarthy, presiding over the committee's inquiry into gray markets, did not press a request for names both of persons from whom Ginsberg buys gypsum board and lath and names of those to whom he sells. He said the committee will decide later whether to demand that Ginsberg give it the names or face a contempt charge.

Conviction of contempt is punishable by up to $1000 fine and a year's imprisonment.

The "gray market" is a name which has come to be applied to sales of materials at prices marked up abnormally above the manufacturer's price.

School Discrimination Studied

Cincinnati, Jan. 14 (AP)—The problem of discrimination against minority racial and religious groups in colleges should be solved by education and voluntary action and not "coercive legislation," a committee of the Association of American Colleges said today in a report to the AAC convention.

Presented by Dr. William P. Tolley, chancelltr of Syracuse University, the report said, however, it believed "the most practicable approach to the problem is the appointment, under the auspices of the association, of a national commission to which instances of discsiminatory policies can be referred, and which will have authority to investigate, and establish the facts as accurately as possible."

The committee said that in several States legislation has been introduced which threatens the tax-exempt status of non-secretarian colleges found guilty of racial and religious discrimination in admitting students.

The committee is in "hearty accord" with the motives of the groups supporting such legislation, but added: "It is our conviction that the problem of discrimination should be solved by education and voluntary action and not by coersive legislation."

European Blueprint With Marshall Plan

U. S. Government Summarizes Needs, Analyzes Prospects for Recovery

Here, country by country, is a brief summary of the United States Government's estimate of the probable needs and contributions of each Marshall Plan country, and its prospects of recovery:

AUSTRIA

"Austria may be expected to become a self-supporting nation with an acceptable standard of living" with three "ifs"—if the United States provides the necessary help, if the present four-power occupation is ended by a satisfactory treaty, and if other European countries recover. The Communists have exploited dissatisfaction and unrest among the people, but they will not succeed if stable economic conditions are created.

At present Austria needs food and raw materials from the western hemisphere. She can export some nitrogen, timber and finished steel already; she should be able later to export electric power, petroleum, textiles and chemicals as well.

BELGIUM

Belgium's "stable middle-of-the road government" is following sound financial policies; communism has dropped steadily since 1945, but is still able to create difficulties. Her economic troubles arise chiefly from lack of coal and from inability to convert sterling receipts into dollars. She needs food, cotton, petroleum products and coal from the western hemisphere; she can contribute crude and finished steel, textiles, machinery and railroad equipment to European recovery. In her customs union with Luxembourg and the Netherlands she has set an example to all Europe. The great Congo colony should accumulate trade surpluses with the United States, and will supply vegetable oils, copper, tin and rubber to western Europe.

DENMARK

Denmark needs to import feeds, fertilizer and fuel to restore her old position as the great dairy farm of western Europe. Her economy is relatively stable, all her major parties are "firmly anti-Communist," but she must be able to resume former exports to Great Britain and bring prices into line with those of competitors in the Dominions. She can make her greatest contribution to Europe by increasing production and export of animal products.

FRANCE

"France is the key to democracy in western Europe." Her Communists have been checked, but "have gained valuable experience for other outbreaks in the future." While the present French government struggles against political and aconomic troubles, Gen. Charles de Gaulle "holds something of a veto" over its composition and policies. At the moment the French government is enjoying "a breathing spell" because De Gaulle apparently prefers not to take power during the hard winter months.

France must check inflation and boost her production, chiefly of bread grains and coal, if she is to recover. In the next fifteen months her main import needs from the western hemisphere are fats and oils, cotton, coal, farming machinery and cereals, the latter needed chiefly for North Africa. During the recovery period she plans to export much-needed steel, machinery, potash fertilizer and many essential consumer goods; her colonies should provide phosphates, iron ore and forest products to Europe.

GREECE

The desperate post war economic problems of Greece have been made worse by guerrilla warfare. If the guerrillas can be "reduced," Greece can achieve "a minimum reconstruction" if the guerrillas are only "contained," a subsistence level is the best that can be predicted. In the next fifteen months her greatest needs from outside will be bread grains, sugar, dairy products, farm machinery and timber. Her contribution to European economic recovery will consist of relatively small exports of tobacco, dried fruit and olive oil.

ICELAND

Iceland's greatest need, and her greatest potential contribution to European recovery, is to regain her former markets for her fish and fish oils. The island republic faces exhaustion of its foreign exchange reserves. It must go on importing food to survive. Politically its Communist party is "strong," but recently there has been a stiffening in resistance to its demands.

IRELAND

If Ireland can get feedstuffs, fertilizer and farm machinery, and also some coal and equipment for its transport system, it can send more of its farm products to help feed the United Kingdom and the rest of western Europe. Like Denmark and Iceland, it was hit hard by not being able to convert its sterling receipts into dollars to pay fo rits needs in the western hemisphere.

ITALY

Italy, another battleground in the struggle with communism, also suffers from overpopulation in relation to its own resources. The DeGasperi government has made a successful start in fighting inflation. American help up to now has been "invaluable," politically and economically, but the stability and survival of a moderate democratic government depends upon an improvement of the "critical" economic situation.

For the next fifteen months Italy will have to continue getting food, cotton and petroleum products in large quantities from the Western Hemisphere. But she can also make big contributions to European recovery, and has done so already. "It would be wrong to think of Italian exports in terms only of wines and cheeses, silk or marble." Italy can make trucks, rolling stock, ships and generators for Europe's industries, fertilizer and tractors for Europe's farms and fruits, vegetables and textiles for Europe's consumers. In addition, Italy can transfer surplus workers to relieve manpower shortages in other countries.

LUXEMBOURG

This tiny Grand Duchy, linked to Belgium by a customs union, is a big steel producer, but its plants need modernizing. Its needs and contributions are estimated with those of Belgium.

THE NETHERLANDS

Holland is short of dollars mainly because of the loss of her former German market, the drying up of the great transit trade from Germany through Dutch ports, and the loss of income from the politically turbulent East Indies. Some part of these and other losses may be permanent. Holland must therefore raise production, cut imports and push exports, as well as restore shipping and port traffic.

Politically the success of the moderate parties will depend in the long run on their ability to adjust the economic life of the country to changed conditions. This will involve an enormous amount of industrial reconstruction. Holland's greatest needs from the Western Hemisphere in the next 15 months will be food, coal, cotton, petroleum products, timber and finished steel. Her greatest contributions to European recovery will be farm and dairy products, electrical equipment, textile products and ships.

NORWAY

Norway depends chiefly upon the earnings of her merchant fleet and will benefit from any reopening of international trade. The government is one of the stablest in western Europe; elections last October showed a "definite weakening" of the Communists. Norway's chief needs from the Western Hemisphere in the next 15 months will be food, petroleum products and finished steel. Her contribution to European recovery will be the services of her tanker fleet and her exports of fish, fish oils and forest products to Europe.

PORTUGAL

Portugal is one of the few in western Europe that can pay for its imports without help from abroad. It has even declared its readiness to extend credits to other Marshall Plan countries, so as to find markets for its wolfram, cork, dried fruits and canned fish.

SWITZERLAND

Switzerland is busy, prosperous, and well able to pay for its imports. It is "heartily in favor of free enterprise," and its Communists are negligible in influence. Switzerland can contribute to European recovery by continuing to send machinery, instruments, chemicals and dyestuffs to other Marshall Plan countries, and by continuing to extend credit to them.

Mother of Five Charged With Larceny of $150

A 36-year-old mother of five children was released in $1000 bond yesterday for appearance today before United State Commissioner Needham C. Turnage on grand larceny charges involving $150.

She was listed as Mrs. Margaret V. Gray, 911 East Capitol st., who, according to Metropolitan Police Lieut. Michael Dowd, was arrested in the theft of $150 entrusted to her while cashier at the House coffee shop in the Capitol Building.

According to Lieutenant Dowd, the woman said she needed the money for food.

Howard U. Gets Grant

A $4000 appropriation has been granted to Howard University by the Office of Naval Research for work on a special project on the oxidation of hydroxylamine under a year's contract, university officials announced yesterday. The contract represents formal approval of the research proposal submitted by Dr. Kelso B. Morris, associate professor of chemistry.

Paris Deputies Elect Slate

munist Marcel Cachin, 78, pro tem presiding officer, declared the session adjourned. The Assembly's seniority committee ruled that Violette could replace him.

In the Assembly the oldest member is the temporary chairman until the elected president takes over. Herriot was elected president Tuesday.

As the deputies filed out of the chamber, Communists lingering in the corridors shouted, "Americans, down with Americans" and "gum chewers."

The French constitution provides that Assembly offices be filled according to the numerical representation of the various political parties and that the post of first vice president go to the party with the most deputies—now the Communists.

The anti-Communist majority agreed in caucus, however, to elect Le Jeune to the post.

The Communist deputies charged that the majority was "violating the constitution on order from your American masters."

They threatened a boycott and said that if they did not get the first vice presidency they would take no parliamentary posts.

Miss Margaret F. Sterne

Funeral services for Miss Margaret Faris Sterne, 64, native Washingtonian and retired Government employe, who died yesterday, will be held at 12:30 p. m. tomorrow at Gawler's funeral home, 1756 Pennsylvania ave. nw. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

Miss Sterne died in Sibley Hospital following an illness of more than two years.

A Treasury Department employe for 38 years, Miss Sterne retired in November, 1945. She had worked in the administrative division of the office of the Treasurer of the United States since 1907, and in the classification section of that office since it was begun in the early '20s.

She was a member of Epiphany Church and formerly made her home at 1505 Buchanan st. nw.

Miss Sterne leaves a nephew, Charles O. Sterne of San Gabriel, Calif.

French and Italian Communists Plan Labor Accord

Paris, Jan. 14 (AP).—The Communist-backed faction of the French labor movement moved officially today to coordinate its activities with the Communist-headed General Confederation of Labor in Italy.

Communist labor leaders in Italy and France were accused during the November-December strike waves in the two countries of working together in harness.

The bureau of the General Confederation of Labor voted today to invite delegates from the Italian General Confederation of Labor to meet for the purpose of organizing a "French-Italian inter-union committee."

The two powerful confederations are the main European labor movements under Communist control outside the "Red Molt" adjoining Russia.

The Italian confederation includes about six million members. The French confederation at one time had about the same number, but a few weeks ago anti-Communists under the leadership of Leon Jouhaux seceded on political as well as economic conditions in the various countries. The report on France, for example, described that country as the key point in Europe's struggle to avert Communist domination, and warned that Communist control of France would virtually destroy the chance of preserving democracy anywhere in western Europe.

Study Places Aid To Britain at Top

In general the documents argued that success of the Marshall Plan was the only way to maintain the present anti-Soviet character of western European governments.

For all their outspokenness, however, and their hundreds of pages of facts and figures, the reports probably will fall short of congressional wishes. Many members of both houses have wanted a precise breakdown of what the United States will allocate to each country, and exactly how much help would take the form of free grants or repayable loans.

Some Repayment Expected

State Department officials gave reporters the carefully guarded estimate that 11 out of the 16 countries probably would be expected to repay at least part of the help they might get from the United States.

Austria and Greece would get everything as free grants rather than loans, according to this calculation; Ireland, Sweden and Norway might get loans but would need no free grants. Britain, France, Italy, the Netherlands, Belgium, Luxembourg, Denmark and Iceland would get part of their help in grants and part in loans.

As for Switzerland, Portugal and Turkey, they would be expected to pay cash for any American supplies, using their own dollar or gold resources.

In spite of this tentative official listing, Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder and Chairman William McC. Martin, jr., of the Export-Import Bank, told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee yesterday that precision was impossible at this time, since conditions might change in the 16 western European countries and western Germany.

Vandenberg Talks Cost

During the hearing Chairman Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) tried persistently, and with some success, to prove that the net cost to the United States Treasury would be much less than the $6,800,000,000 which Congress has been asked to provide for the first 15 months.

First he drew from Snyder a reluctant indorsement of the earlier "rough estimate" by the State Department that between 20 and 40 per cent of the $6,800,000,000 would take the form of repayable loans rather than free grants.

"So if the low figure is taken," Vandenberg asked, "it would reduce the net impact on the Treasury to 5.5 billion, and if the high figure to 4.2 billion?"

Snyder Cites Yardstick

"I don't think we can get much closer to it," Snyder answered. The Secretary explained that each country's capacity to repay would be the yardstick used to decide between a loan and a free grant. This drew from Vandenberg the comment that "every loan you make, then, must be a good loan."

Next Vandenberg called attention to still another possible reduction in what he called the "net impact" of the $6,800,000,000 on the Treasury. This was a provision in the Administration's proposed bill letting the administrator guarantee new investments in European recovery projects by private American business. The guarantees would protect them only against abnormal risks, such as an inability to convert profits into dollars.

The draft bill proposes that private investments within the scope of the recovery program be guaranteed up to 5 per cent of the total, which Vandenberg promptly calculated at 340 million dollars.

Agrees on Investments

"So, if private American companies came forward and offered to invest in Europe and got guarantees to the full amount of the 340 million dollars allowed," asked Vandenberg, "the $6,800,000,000 would be reduced in terms of actual expenditure?"

"Definitely yes," Snyder answered.

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge (R., Mass.) challenged Snyder sharply on the dollars and gold hoarded by private citizens of countries expecting help under the Marshall Plan.

The Senator, who traveled the length and breadth of France by automobile last summer, said it was "an outrage" that wealthy Europeans on the Continent were evading taxes and living in luxury on their dollar hoards.

Hits Selfish Few

"In England," he said, "there is a feeling that all echelons of the population are bearing their fair share, whereas in other countries there is a small, selfish, bloated class whose assets are spread all over the place and should be put to use.

"I believe class hatreds in Europe spring from seeing these people gallivanting in flashy cars in countries that are flat on their backs."

"Would you be willing," he asked Snyder, "to see the bill include something like this: 'It is the sense and hope of the Congress that the recipient government will exert every effort to utilize these assets'?"

"Of course I would be willing," Snyder answered.

Sees 'Folly' in Sales

But he warned that it would be "folly" to compel European nations to sell their investments, or those of their citizens, in this country to help pay for the recovery program. In his prepared statement, and in answer to Lodge, he argued that the European investments here were sources of dollar earnings and that it would be destructive to compel their sale.

As for the gold and dollar holdings of private European citizens in American banks, he said the Treasury was studying the problem of how to get them disgorged.

Lodge explained later that he was not urging the liquidation of foreign investments here, but that he wanted more prodding of the Europens to put these private investments to use "in the service of the Marshall Plan."

1300 Reported Slain in Pakistan

100 Seen Trapped

25 Mission Aides Escape Chinese Reds

Hankow, China, Jan. 14 (U.P.).—A Lutheran mission rescue plane evacuated 25 missionaries from the Communist-infested Yangtze River basin today, but it was feared a new Red offensive north of the river had trapped at least 100 more in the town of Laohokow.

Missionaries and their families have been streaming into Laohokow, a Han River port, 200 miles northwest of Hankow, since three missionaries were murdered Monday at Siangyang, 40 miles southwest of Laohokow.

Daniel Nelson, chairman of the Lutheran World Federation, in charge of air evacuation, said he was afraid fighting in the Laohokow area would prevent a rescue flight tomorrow.

Government dispatches reported bitter fighting between Nationalists and the Communist forces of one-eyed Gen. Liu Po-chen between Laohokow and Tenghsien, 40 miles northeast.

An American missionary said Chinese Communists have become "increasingly hostile toward Americans during the past months.

"Every time Congress appears ready to give Chiang Kai-shek a loan, the Communists take it out on us," he said.

New Violence Flares in Delhi As Gandhi Fasts

New Delhi, Jan. 14 (U.P.).—Mob violence broke out in Delhi today and dispatches reported the slaughter of 1300 Hindus and Sikhs in Pakistan.

The outbursts came as Mohandas K. Gandhi, 78, entered the second day of his "fash unto glorious death" in protest against Hindu-Moslem enmity.

A mob of Hindus and Sikh refugees brought from Pakistan attacked a truck in the old city area. The attack was over before police arrived and no check of casualties was possible.

Reliable reports said that about 1300 out of a convoy of 2400 Hindus and Sikhs being taken from northwest frontier Province to Indian territory were killed earlier this week and that 400 others were kidnayed.

Tribesmen and Moslem refugees attacked the convoy Monday at Guerat railroad station 80 miles north of Lahore, dispatches said 700 reached the Indian border.

Pakistan Insists U. N. Consider All India

New York, Jan. 14 (AP).—Pakistan insisted today that the United Nations take up the whole broad question of the Indian subcontinent where communal strife and bloodshed have claimed thousands of lives since partition last August 15. Indian demanded the U. N. discuss only the fighting in Kashmir.

The new dominions set forth their positions as delegations prepared for the start of Security Council debate tomorrow at Lake Success.

India brought the case to the council by charging Pakistan was aiding the invaders of the princely state of Kashmir. The first major clash thus loomed over the scope of the debate.

The fast started by Mohandas K. Gandhi, Hindu spiritual leader, appeared as a factor in the case. Goplaswami Ayyangar of India said his country is apprehensive over the situation should the aged Dandhi die.

"I fear a terrible wave of violence and blood-spilling would sweep all India," he declared.

In Washington, Henry F. Grady, United States Ambassador to India, said there is widespread feeling there that Gandhi has begun his present fast in New Delhi because he "fears India is on the verage of aggressive action toward Pakistan."

U. S. Bars Brazilian Architect as Red

The State Department yesterday said Oscar Niemeyer, noted Brazilian architect, cannot enter the United States because he is an avowed Communist. Niemeyer seeks entrance to lecture at the Yale School of the Fine Arts.

4 Children Die in Fire

Port Matilda, Pa., Jan. 14 (AP).—Four small children burned to death in their mountain home as their parents watched helplessly. Harold D. Stanton, jr., a woodcutter, said he and his wife had gone to neighboring homes about 11 p. m. last night, leaving the children in bed. When they returned the bungalow was a mass of flames. The victims were Paul Stanton, 7, Melvin 5, Joyce 4, and Donna 2.

Guerillas Kill 3 Greeks on U. S. Aid Job

Athens, Greece, Jan. 14 (U.P.).—Guerillas slit the throats of three Greek workers on an American aid project which involves reopening the Brallo railroad tunnel near Lamia and warned that the same fate awaited any Greek working for Americans, United States engineers reported today. The tunnel project is 95 miles northwest of Athens.

Maj. Gen. William Livesay, head of the American military mission, and Dwight Griswold, chief of the aid mission, announced agreement was reached today with Greek authorities to call up 12 more national defense corps battalions at once. This will raise the total of active units to 54.

Others will be summoned into service later under a program which eventually will see 100 battalions in action.

Skirmishing was reported in the Konitsa sector, 5 miles from the Albania frontier, when 350 guerillas attacked Ayipantes bridge, 10 miles southwest of Konitsa. The guerillas were thrown back after a four-hour battle with army troops, press dispatches said.

Rebel artillery was said to have fired again from Albanian territory onto army-held heights in the Konitsa area.

Guerillas surrounded the village of Arahova, 110 miles west of Athens, and attacked from three points in a day-long battle Tuesday, dispatches from Patras said. The besieged town repulsed three separate assaults during the night.

Civil organizations at Levadia, 80 miles northwest of Athens, protested to the government their area was controlled by guerillas and asked troops be sent to their aid. Deputy Lucas Koutsopetalos was kidnaped from Levadia by guerillas two days ago.

Other dispatches reported a diversionary guerilla attack on Sidirokastron in Thrace while the main force looted the nearby village of Kamaroto.

Devaluation Rumors Raise British Shares

London, Jan. 14 (AP).—Rumors from Paris that Britain and France may discuss simultaneous devaluation of the pound and franc pushed leading industrial shares up as high as three shillings (60 cents) in late trading today but most responsible brokerage sources were skeptical of impending monetary changes.

Devaluation rumors have popped up from time to time in recent months but Treasury spokesmen have consistently discounted them, pointing out that Britain in the past always has been proud of the stability of the pound.

Main reason any devaluation in the pound is unlikely, one Whitehall source said, is that there undoubtedly will be no change in financial policies until Congress takes finan action on Marshall plan aid.

Rotterdam, Jan. 14 (U.P.).—Exiled King Leopold of Belgium, who is now in Switzerland, will sail shortly for the United States aboard the Holland-American liner Sommelsdijk, the ship line's press offices said today. Leopold is scheduled to board the liner in Lisbon sometime after January 17.

Senate Agrees To Begin Study Of 'Voice' Bill

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Legislation to combat "the hostile propaganda" of Russia and world Communist parties by authorizing and extending the United States information service comes before the Senate tomorrow.

The Senate agreed yesterday to begin consideration of the measure which was reported out with the unanimous approval of the full Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

The House passed a somewhat similar bill last session. The Senate group has made a number of changes in the House version.

Russian Stand Stressed

In a report on the Senate bill, Senator H. Alexander Smith (R., N. J.), who headed the subcommittee which studied it, laid heavy stress upon the need to counter Russian propaganda with the truth about the United States.

"The American people, our ideals, and our form of government are being misrepresented and distorted abroad by the propaganda of other nations," the report stated.

"The prestige of the United States and of democracy itself are suffering as a result of this unequal battle of ideas. We must be able to tell abroad the truth about the United States. We cannot afford to let others tell that story for us."

The report urged the Senate to provide the basic authority for the program, which has been carried on by the State Department without express Congressional action.

"The United States information program cannot begin to fulfill its responsibilities properly so long as it remains a stepchild without Congressional authorization," the committee declared.

The committee also found that the character of modern international relations and communications "demand and warrant increased activities abroad in the field of public relations."

Strong Measures Needed

"The present hostile propaganda campaigns directed against democracy, human welfare, freedom, truth and the United States, spearheaded by the government of the Soviet Union and the Communist parties throughout the world, call for urgent, forthright, and dynamic measures to disseminate truth. The truth can constitute a satisfactory counter defense against actions which can only be described as psychological warfare against us as well as the purposes of the United Nations," the report stated.

The report disclosed that the State Department now has before it a number of requests from governments in Europe and Asia asking for governmental advisers from the United States. Until enabling legislation is passed the State Department cannot arrange such assignments except in Latin America, Liberia and the Philippines. And yet, the committee states, these opportunities to extend and cement United States friendship should not be rejected.

Yugoslav Request To Release Frozen Assets Rejected

The United States has rejected a Yugoslav request for immediate release of some 70 million dollars of Yugoslav assets frozen in this country during the war.

This was disclosed yesterday when the State Department published notes exchanged by Yugoslav Ambassador Sava Kosanovic and Secretary of State Marshall.

Both notes spoke of continuing negotiations for an over-all settlement of claims each government has against the other.

Marshall said American claims include 42 million dollars worth of properties seized by Yugoslavia through nationalization or for other reasons and compensation for two American airplanes shot down by Yugoslav forces in August, 1946.

The notes included, too, a sharp exchange over attitudes toward European economic recovery.

Forrestal Warns U. S. to Keep Strong

Can't Afford It

Iran Refuses 'Large' U. S. Arms Order

Tehran, Jan. 14 (U.P.).—Premier Ibrahim Hakimi said today that Iran could not afford to buy 25 million dollars worth of war materials offered by the United States and did not need that much armament for internal security.

"The maximum we could use, would be around 10 million dollars worth of war material," he said.

The Premier who came to the head of the government in the crisis that followed the resignation of Ahmed Qavam over Russian negotiations for oil rights, said Iran wanted no interference from any foreign power.

"We must set our house in order," he said. "We can only do so if there is security and non-interference by foreign powers in our internal affairs. My government will make no distinction between any of our foreign neighbors."

Hakimi said it would not be to Iran's advantage to accept a proposed loan of 250 million dollars from the International Bank to be used partly in exploring oil fields which Russia covets.

He said royalties from the Anglo-Iranian Oil Co.—estimated at 80 million dollars a year—would cover the main expenses for Iran to develop her own oil fields.

Salesman Finds Soviet Officials Phone Shy

Hastings, Mich., Jan. 14 (U.P.).—Radio Salesman Bernard Gardner, who said he wanted to "find out from a guy who should know what the Russians are up to," picked up the phone today and called Moscow.

Gardner asked for Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov, but instead got someone named Simonov in the Soviet press bureau.

"I want to talk to Molotov," Gardner said.

He was told that Molotov "wouldn't talk at any time." Then the connection was broken.

"I guess those fellows never will talk," Gardner said.

Sees New Balance Of Power Needed For World Peace

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Defense Secretary Forrestal wants the United States to keep strong and to make it clear that "anyone who wants to succeed Hitler will have a hard time of it."

World peace and security, he told a press conference yesterday, will come only when a new balance of power is established "within or without" the United Nations.

Giving qualified indorsement to the report of President Truman's Air Policy Commission which recommended giving the Air Force 20,500 latest type planes, Forrestal denied America plans an "aggressive" air force.

We are building air power for defense, he said, and added:

"Democracies never planned a war aimed at anybody and we're not doing that today. At the same time we'll resist any attempt of any nation to do what Hitler tired to do."

Cites Century of Peace

Forrestal said relative peace prevailed during the century between 1815 and 1914, because a "balance of power" existed between rival European nations which discouraged any country from making war because of the consequences. That balance no longer exists, he added.

"When you get the balance of power redressed within the United Nations or not of it, you will have stability and peace," the defense chief said.

Pointing up his assertion that the United States must be strong until this power balance comes about, Forrestal said that plans are going forward to set up a radar warning network around America.

Such a network probably would include some "picket ships" such as urged by Admiral Chester W. Nimitz recently, he said.

Warns on Planning

Commenting on the air policy commission report, Forrestal agreed with the recommendation for an "air force in being" rather than a skeletonized outfit to be filled out after trouble starts. But he warned that planning future air power must "reflect the experience of the war and as much research as possible."

Building numbers of planes would not provide a strong air force, as they may become outmoded quickly, Forrestal said. It is important to estimate accurately when jet propulsion will replace propeller-driven planes, he added.

Forrestal said he considered the aircraft industry to be in "fairly healthy condition today." He denied reports that 200 selected officers had been sent to guard American oil pipelines in the Middle East.

Red Plot to Wreck Aid Plan Is Reported

Berlin, Jan. 14 (U.P.).—Gen. Lucius D. Clay, United States commander in chief, said tonight that he was in Berlin as the agent of a country with "immeasurable strength" and that he intended to remain here "with no fears and no nerves" despite any Russian pressure to oust the western allies.

As Clay made his statement allied authorities bared a purported Communist plot—asserted to have the backing of Russia—to sabotage the Marshall Plan by a series of strikes.

Allied informants asserted that the top-secret plan came into their possession by means they refused to divulge.

It named a general staff of German leftists to direct a four-month sabotage program.

The strike plan would fit in perfectly with any Russian move to out the western allies from Berlin in that it would weaken their position in Germany generally. As regards the Marshall Plan, Germany is the keystone to its entire success.

Its timetable was as follows:

December—Work to achieve Communist demands for a plebiscite in Germany so that Germans could decide their own future.

January and February—Organize strike committees locally.

March—Effect a series of general strikes to disrupt the economy of western Germany.

The strikes would be carried out under Communist control, but the Communists would remain in the background.

It directed that workers' demonstrations should be conducted along with transport tieups and said that "all means" should be used to disrupt supply services.

Macfadden to Seek Florida Governorship

Miami Beach, Fla., Jan. 14 (U.P.).—Physical Culturalist Bernar Macfadden, 80, entered the race for Governor of Florida today.

His last attempt to win public office was in 1940, when he polled a surprisingly strong vote for the United States Senate, but lost in a runoff to the late Charles O. Andrews.

Poster Boy Opens Drive

Tousle-haired Terry Tulles, "the little man with the big job," minced no words here yesterday to open the 1948 "March of Dimes" national fund-raising campaign.

"Give to the March of Dimes," he said succinctly.

His message brought cheers from thousands who crowded the opening ceremonies, in front of the Capitol Theater. For they, and television audiences, saw Terry standing bravely on the leg braces he's been wearing since before the first of his three birthdays.

The Laurel, Miss., boy, co-starred at the ceremony with Margaret Truman, the President's daughter. A victim of the crippling disease, he was chosen campaign poster boy in the drive to raise funds to rout polio through contributions to the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.

Following brief addresses by Miss Truman, District Commissioner John Russell Young, and Edgar Morris, general chairman of the District Chapter March of Dimes, the party proceeded to the Lincoln Theater, where the ceremony was repeated.

In a dedicatory luncheon commemorating the start of the drive to raise 30 million dollars nationally by January 30, birthday anniversary of the founder, the late Franklin D. Roosevelt, Washington's part in the Foundation was outlined.

New Constellation Sets 565 MPH Mark

Newark, N. J., Jan. 14 (AP).—An Eastern Airlines new type Constellation, flying from Miami, Fla., to Newark, today set what airline officials believed to be the fastest time record for the trip and the top speed for commercial airliners by hitting 565 miles per hour.

Spokesman said the trip was completed in two hours, 41 minutes and 30 seconds. The plane cruised at an average speed of 421 miles per hour at 23,000 feet with 55 passengers and a crew of five, including Pilot C. R. Musick.

URGENT MESSAGE

To Every User of Fuel Oil

THE DEMAND for fuel oil today is greater than ever in the history of our nation.

To meet this huge demand, the oil industry is doing its utmost. It is producing more oil products than ever before. It is spending over 4 billion dollars to find new sources of supply, to expand refinery and distribution facilities.

But this winter it's necessary for every user of fuel oil to help conserve the supply.

If you burn fuel oil or kerosene in your home, follow those four simple rules. You'll not only help to minimize the fuel oil pinch—you'll also save money on your fuel bills!

1. Keep temperature as low as possible consistent with health in the daytime, 60 or below at night.
2. Keep doors and windows closed. Close off rooms not in use. Draw shades at night.
3. Seal all leaks around doors and windows—to keep heat in, cold out.
4. Have your heating system checked for efficiency.

If everyone saves...there will be enough for all!

Opportunity Missed

The nomination of Guy Mason for a third term as District Commissioner is disappointing chiefly because it suggests a standpat attitude at the White House in respect of the District of Columbia. We have said before and we now repeat that we regard Mr. Mason as a better-than-average Commissioner. But his influence is negative so far as the great issue now before the local community is concerned. Congress is seriously considering the revival of suffrage here and the creation of a new home-rule government. President Truman has put himself on record as favoring these objectives. Yet, when it comes to filling this position on the District's highest administrative and policy-making body, he continues the old regime that, out of habit and personal interests, is antagonistic to the proposed reforms.

If Congress approves the Auchincloss-Ball bill, the transition from the obsolete government now in operation to the new council-manager system could be greatly facilitated by a Commissioner sympathetic with the shift. More important is new community leadership in approaching this undertaking. Such leadership might well have come from an energetic Commissioner who is wedded to the idea of home rule for Washington. We cannot avoid a feeling of regret that the President has missed his opportunity to make such an appointment, as he missed the opportunity of giving a boost to the Auchincloss plan in his message to Congress. Now that this plan has been translated into bill form, we hope that Mr. Truman will at least send a special message to Congress asking the enactment of some sort of local home-rule plan.

Inside Information

Gov. Harold E. Stassen's query addressed to the President answers itself. The query is this: "Does a man who has admitted under investigation that he made approximately a million dollars ($932,703 to be exact) in personal profit by speculating since the war in increased prices of food and commodities belong in the position of assistant to the Secretary of the Army for procurement and industrial mobilization?" The answer, of course, is no. And the answer remains the same if it is asked respecting a member of the United States Senate intimately involved in agricultural problems, a physician with easy access to the seats of the mighty or any other high public official whose position might enable him to profit from inside information about the development of governmental policy.

Mr. Pauley's reiterated response to Governor Stassen that his trading was not based on "inside information" is beside the point. A man wagering large amounts of money on the fluctuations of commodity exchanges is, to begin with, not a man free to devote his full time and attention to his public office. However conscientious and disinterested he may strive to be, moreover, it is impossible for him—or for the public—to feel sure that his actions and motives are altogether unaffected by his private interests. Finally, such a man is a constant embarrassment to his associates. They must be always on guard lest some careless observation, some chance remark, convey the kind of "inside information" Mr. Pauley professes never to have gleaned. Public servants, in short, should not be persons inevitably subject to suspicion.

Farm Heritage

The tradition that it was an asset to be born on a farm long had a strong hold on this country. One reason was the importance of the farm vote to office seekers. At present the urban population has the political edge. But science has come forward to show there are other advantages in having a rural start in life. A recent study of 1200 Ohio children showed that those on farms were happier than those living in cities, were more self-reliant, got on better with people, and had a greater sense of personal worth, or "belonging." Sociologists from Ohio State University and the Ohio Department of Public Welfare, who made the study, applied personality tests to rural, village and city children. The only area in which farm children lagged was in their sense of personal freedom. Farm families were rated less democratic than urban ones.

Many educators and parents are concerned over the effect of city living on American children's ability to stand on their own feet and to meet and conquer difficulties. While city life offers advantages of sanitation, medical care, education and mental stimulation, it deprives children of the chores and rugged responsibilities they get on farms and makes them more dependent on others for their comforts and activities. In group enterprises, country-bred children often show more ability to get ahead and act independently.

However, the present widespread trend toward decentralization of cities and toward semirural living is bringing the adventures and challenges of outdoor life to an increasing number of former city children. Summer camps also are giving them rural experience. Many private schools are including farm activities, especially the care of animals, in their curricula. There seems to be growing realization that the American farm boy and girl have a heritage that must be preserved.

Marshall Concept

It is gratifying to note the sharpness of senatorial reminders to State Department spokesmen of the continental concept of the Marshall Plan. Senator Lodge's comments are particularly pertinent. He thinks that the concept of ERP should be written into any enactment. We heartily agree. In our opinion this concept should have furnished the very first statement of the conferees of the 16 nations after they had been brought together by the Marshall offer. Certainly it should have been the preamble of their subsequent report. Only if the ERP produces an economic organization of Europe as the preliminary to a customs union will this plan be a success. There would be no excuse for the American investment unless an integration of western European economies were the object.

The concept is explicit in Secretary Marshall's speech of June 5, though he has never repeated his initial emphasis upon it. Mr. Marshall bespoke "a coordinated approach to Europe's problems." He had in mind "a cure and not a palliative." He aimed at the establishment of a "working economy for Europe." The initiative was avowedly conceived after Mr. Marshall had read the Churchill speech the previous month inaugurating the United Europe movement. Here is something that should have fired Europe's statesmanship as it did the imagination of the people of Europe. Clearly Europe can never regain its feet as a collection of economic sovereignties. It must set up continental industries with the nations contributing their specialties to reapportioned finishing plants—all supplying a truly European, or a mass consumption, market.

The hesitation in Europe seems to be dictated primarily by Britain. Britain has not chosen whether to throw her energies into the creation of a Marshall Europe or leave that creation to circumstances and Anno Domini. She does not even seem to know whether her true interests would be served by a Marshall Europe. Surely, in the light of such developments as the growing link between Canada and the United States as a result of America's tariff reductions, the answer should be clearly on the side of leadership in a Marshall Europe. Only with Britain's support can the Marshall concept be realized, and it is to be hoped that the French request for another meeting of the CEEC (Conference of European Economic Cooperation) will be acted upon. Senatorial needling will help. The surprise is that the State Department should be so backward. It is said by way of extenuation that the caution of the State Department is due to a desire not to encourage false hopes in Europe. But the fact is that an integrated Europe is to Europe's advantage with or without American cooperation.

Kuter's Salary

It would have been an extremely bad precedent for the Senate Armed Service Committee to have approved President Truman's proposal to permit Maj. Gen. Laurence S. Kuter to retain his military status while serving as new chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Board. The committee acted quite properly, we think, in refusing both to confirm a military man on active duty in a civilian post and to make an exception to the Federal salary scale for one particular individual. The significance of the entire affair lies in the conditions that led the President to suggest such a devious compromise.

The committee's objection, and our own, was not to General Kuter as a person. It is regrettable in several ways that General Kuter cannot accept the job under the terms on which it must be offered; his qualifications, especially his experience on the council of the International Civil Aviation Organization, would have been useful in a CAB chairman. But General Kuter can scarcely be blamed for his unwillingness to incur a salary cut of 33 1-3 per cent, from $15,000 to $10,000, or, for that matter, for his unwillingness to resign his commission after a promising career in the Air Force.

What the struggle over the CAB chairmanship demonstrates is the impossible conditions under which the President must attempt to persuade competent men to accept high administrative posts. The President, to be sure, has aggravated the trouble by his own actions, as in his brusque disposition of James M. Landis. But basically the difficulty is in the $10,000 salary limitation on virtually all Federal jobs. In most cases this means a considerable financial sacrifice for the kind of men best qualified for top positions. Certainly this is one of the reasons why the President has looked increasingly to military men for leadership. It is the major problem with which he must contend as he searches anew for a CAB chairman. Incidentally, we hope in this connection that he will not exclude from his search the members of his Air Policy Commission.

The difficulty here illustrated is of sufficient gravity to warrant the immediate attention of Congress. Indeed, the report of the Air Policy Commission recommends specifically that the salaries of CAB members be set at $15,000; and the Civil Aeronautics Act itself provides salaries of $12,000, though appropriations have limited this to $10,000. Surely there can be neither pride nor satisfaction in a situation in which important positions go begging while the President canvasses "angels" with enough independent income to permit them to serve the Government of the United States.

Equal Education

Although the Supreme Court did not say in so many words that Ada Lois Sipuel must be admitted to the University of Oklahoma School of Law, there appears to be no other way, at least for the time being, to satisfy the court's mandate. This law school is the only tax-supported institution for legal education in Oklahoma. Miss Sipuel is concededly qualified for admission on all grounds save the fact that she is a Negro. The Supreme Court reverted to its 1938 decision in the Gaines case, in which it declared that the State of Missouri must admit a Negro to the law school of the State University "in the absence of other and proper provision for his legal training within the State." Oklahoma, the court declared on Monday, must provide legal education for Miss Sipuel "in conformity with the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment and provide it as soon as it does for applicants of any other group."

Thus the court did not ban segregated legal education, as Miss Sipuel's attorney asked it to. But since no facilities now exist in Oklahoma to educate her on a segregated basis, the inference seems inescapable that until they can be established she must be allowed to share the advantages of white students at the State University law school; in a poll taken two years ago, incidentally, these students voted to let her in. Perhaps the lawmakers of Oklahoma will discover, after Miss Sipuel has attended classes at the university for a little while, that her presence does not actually contaminate her white fellow-students and that it would simply not be worth the enormous trouble and expense to set up a separate system of legal education. Perhaps, even, other States requiring segregated schools will learn the same lesson from this interesting experiment.

It is a fiction, of course, that a State affords Negroes the equal protection of its laws in accordance with the constitutional requirement by giving them "separate but equal" educational facilities. The President's Committee on Civil Rights referred to the "separate but equal" system as "one of the outstanding myths of American history" and pointed out that "not even the most mathematically precise equality of segregated institutions can properly be considered equality under the law. No argument or rationalization can alter this basic fact: A law which forbids a group of American citizens to associate with other citizens in the ordinary course of daily living creates inequality by imposing a caste status on the minority group." Sooner or later, the Supreme Court will have to face this stubborn fact.

Reading Matter

Senator Wiley expressed a commendable thought in calling for greater numbers of American newspapers and magazines to be flown abroad, and we hope that the Nation's publishers, not the State Department, will act upon it. Our foreign information program, and, indeed, the Marshall Plan itself, can have no more important adjunct than the spread of American reading matter. The situation now is that, aside from the limited American publishing operations in foreign cities and the relatively few copies sent by air from this country, American periodicals are a month or six weeks old when they reach libraries and reading rooms abroad. Our disadvantage in the ideological struggle is thus obvious; Moscow papers can be had in almost any European capital the next morning.

The ideal solution for this problem would be for American newspapers and magazines either to set up editions published in Europe and Asia or to band together and promote a commentary service for distribution abroad. Perhaps, also, the idea might be considered of encouraging the kind of overseas editions which were put out during the war by several of our newspapers and magazines. Under this arrangement all copy would be written, edited and set in type in this country, but the actual printing would be carried on abroad by means of lightweight printing plates flown from the United States.

But one or the other of these ideas would take time, and Senator Wiley's suggestion could be carried out immediately. There is a place in his picture, moreover, for book publishers, for American books are desired almost universally. Universities in Germany and Japan, for example, have received practically no American textbooks and technical material since before the war. To place such material in their hands now could be to acquire an inestimable asset in cementing friendship and spreading American ideas.

Every man in these perilous days must be his own Marshall Plan according to his ability, as Mr. Drew Pearson has demonstrated so well and so admirably with his Friendship Train project. In the battle we are waging, food for men's minds is no less imperative than food for their stomachs. What must be guarded against, however, is the suggestion of Government subsidization; this would be a double-edged weapon, for it would give the Kremlin a weapon in their ideaological war on America by demonstrating the same tie-in between press and state that Russia has.

"The American Way"

In the papers of January 5 there appeared a large advertisement, over the signature of Harvey Firestone, jr., which was essentially an essay on the virtues of the American economic system. You can't eat lovely phrases like "the American way" any more than Russians can fill their stomachs with such vacuous concepts as "the dictatorship of the proletariat." It does annoy me, however, for Mr. Firestone to imply that most of the good things about American life today are the direct result of our "system of free enterprise."

He does credit a few other factors such as our good fortune in the matter of natural resources, our democratic form of government and one or two other things which are equally unconnected with "free enterprise." Strangely, though, he says nothing about the exploitation of mass-production techniques, nor about the contributions of science and invention, nor about the contribution of our great advances (which still fall far short of adequacy, however) in mass education, without which the large class of mentally qualified workers, necessary to the operation of our complex industrial society, would not exist. It might fairly be asked, even, what proof there is that the "free enterprise" system was an indispensable factor in the industrial progress of our country?

I couldn't help wondering, when I started to read this "advertisement," what was its immediate purpose. I think I found the answer in the third paragraph, which says (referring to the Marshall Plan for European recovery): "But there are those among us who feel that some of the nations that are asking for help will come back again and again for more and more unless we insist that they rebuild again on the sound foundation that to produce is to progress."

If this is translated into straight talk, it probably means: "Before we lend any money to foreign nations, we should insist that they agree to abandon all tendencies toward socialism." The assumption is, of course, that these nations wouldn't be in their present fix if they hadn't strayed from the path of free enterprise, and that, therefore, there's no point in helping them to get on their feet until they get back in line.

GSI Accident

On January 8, Mr. Denny J. Belluci, a supervisor employed by Government Services, Inc., in Munitions cafeteria, was injured by a gas explosion originating from an oven. Because of the strike against the corporation's cafeterias, reporters from all papers called my office immediately to ascertain the cause of the blast. I did not have the full details, but I gave them the only information I had, based on first reports. This was to the effect that Mr. Belluci had tossed a lighted match into a defective oven which he knew had been filled with gas, without waiting for the gas to clear. I went on to state that he apparently had not used the best judgment under the circumstances.

The purpose of this letter is to correct the original impression given and clear Mr. Belluci of any erroneous implication of carelessness. Following usual procedure that morning, he began to light the gas ovens with a taper. After lighting one oven, he started toward another to light it and it was then that the explosion occurred. He discovered that the jets were open on one oven. The only explanation which can be offered now is that some person, possibly a new employe, had attempted to light this oven before Mr. Belluci and, failing, had neglected to fully turn off the jets, thus permitting gas to accumulate.

May I add that Mr. Belluci has always shown himself to be one of our most careful, conscientious, hard-working supervisors and his injury in line of duty is a serious loss to the operation of Munitions cafeteria.

Cooperative Apartments

I was interested in your January 10 cartoon on rent control. I wonder if you are aware of a situation that is developing into what may be a menace to many apartment dwellers in Washington for whom the present Rent Control Act offers no protection.

A certain realty company is obtaining the control of old apartment houses, generally down at the heel, and is forcing the present tenants into a cooperative apartment plan by which they will either be obliged to purchase their individual apartments at greatly inflated prices or be evicted.

The apartment house in which I have lived for over 30 years is one of these. Most of the other tenants, who are also long-time residents, have neither the means nor the inclination to put money into a venture which, because of the age and poor repair of the building, may result in the loss of their entire investment.

I hope that Congress can be prevailed upon by way of an amendment to the Rent Control Act to provide other Washington apartment dwellers legal protection in the future. I understand that New York City has a law requiring the consent of 75 per cent of the tenants before an old apartment house can be converted to a cooperative.

Marshall Plan Cost

Based on an estimated population of 140 million in the United States, the 17 billion dollars sought by Messrs. Truman and Marshall for foreign relief amounts to approximately $121.43 for each man, woman and child, or $30.36 a year for the four years fixed by those gentlemen as necessary to allow them to change human nature and produce "peace on earth, goodwill toward all men."

At the same time, in an outburst of warm-heartedness, they are willing to forgive us our taxes to the tune of $40 a year, so that each of us will pick up annually about $9.64, or slightly less than 3 cents a day. Such generosity should be compared with that exhibited during the Rooseveltian era.

When will the people wake up to the fact that the Truman-Marshall Plan is nothing more than a continuation of the Roosevelt Plan to scatter this Nation's wealth and resources to the four winds?

Forest Fire Threat

It is my belief America is threatened by new forest fires at once. Just after the fires of London were shown in the six-million-dollar movie all over America, the recent forest fires blazed up in New England and other places.

A picture about to be released by RKO Radio Pictures has in it a dangerously exciting forest fire. This picture is Walt Disney's Bambi. How many disordered minds saw the fires in Forever Amber before the New England fires broke out? How many disordered minds will see the blaze and hear the roar in Bambi?

Can you arouse your readers, fire insurance companies, the great paper companies and newspapers as well as Congressmen to persuade Eric Johnston and movie directors that the sight and sound of roaring fires must be cut out of Bambi at once?

Trading In Futures

Mr. Herbert J. Holland, in his letter of January 10, presented the futures broker point of view. He got off to a bad start, however, by misquoting a sentence from my letter of January 5. What I said, referring to terms used in futures trading, was: "The terms buy and sell as used in the futures market do not mean buy and sell in the customary meaning of these terms. They merely indicate to the futures broker what sort of entries to make in his customers' accounts—whether the bets are to be recorded on the 'long' side or the 'short' side of the account." He omitted the last 11 words.

What most distresses me is Mr. Holland's intimation of my alleged ignorance of the facts of futures trading. Here are some facts which he will be unable to deny.

1. The only place where actual grain is bought and sold, for present and future delivery, is the cash grain market.

2. The grain futures market handles only futures "contracts," which are not contracts in any legal sense of the term.

3. Futures contracts lack consideration; there is no purchase money in the futures market—only broker's commissions and customer's margins for the protection of the broker in regard to price changes. Margin money in this game is not of the nature of purchase money. That is why futures traders object so violently to Congress passing any law with respect to margins.

4. The wheat futures contract contains no description of the kind or grade of the grain supposed to be bought and sold—just "wheat" or "corn" or other generic sort of grain. Flour millers do not buy or sell actual wheat in the wheat futures market; they do that in the cash wheat market, either for present or futures delivery.

5. When, in infrequent cases, delivery results from trading in wheat futures, delivery is made in the cash wheat market, not in the wheat futures market.

6. When, as a result of trading in wheat futures, delivery is made, it is the so-called seller's option to determine what kind and grade of wheat to deliver; that is, the so-called buyer has nothing to say about what kind or grade of wheat he shall receive.

7. The futures broker's "buying" customer does not deal with any particular "seller," but only with his own broker; and so also as to the broker's "selling" customer. There are no legal parties to the so-called contract.

8. The so-called seller does not sell anything; he buys from his broker a chance on price changes for which he receives a confirmation slip or receipt for commission money. That is his "contract."

9. Both "buyer" and "seller" deposit with their broker the same amount of commission money and price-change margin money. That would not be the case if the seller were actually selling anything.

10. In the wheat futures market there is no difference between what the "speculator" does and what the "hedger" does. They both gamble on price changes.

Mr. Holland's quotation from Justice Holmes does not reflect the legal effect of the decision from which it was quoted. Even a layman could ascertain what the court held by reading the syllabus appearing at the top of the decision in the case of Board of Trade v. Christie Grain and Stock Co., 198 U. S. 236. I suggest also that Mr. Holland read the decision in the case of Dickson v. Uhlmann Grain Co., 288 U. S. 188.

Inflation Offensive

By Malvina Lindsay

Minute Men Mobilize

SCENE—A citizens meeting.

Chairman—Fellow citizens: We are at our Dunkirk in our war against inflation. Unless we act quickly the boom—and bust—will be completely out of hand. Has anyone a suggestion?

Mr. Trumpet — Roosevelt — I mean President Truman brought this on us.

Mr. Whinny — That's politics! Who killed OPA? Taft!

Chairman (rapping)—Let's have constructive suggestions.

Mrs. Feddup—I want to say I'm tired of paying $1.50 a pound for steak to buy fur coats for meat packers' wives.

Mr. Gloss—I object! As representative of Amalgamated Alibi, Inc., let me say that the packers are losing money—that is almost. High costs are driving them to bankruptcy—that is virtually.

Mrs. Feddup—I'm also tired of paying cattlemen 75 per cent profit on every pot roast I buy.

Mr. Gloss—Wait! The cattlemen are in a bad way—relatively speaking.

Mr. Parrott—It's all because a lot of do-gooders are trying to play Santa Claus to the world.

Judge Pudd—It all comes down to the consumers. They're all buying $6 steaks.

Mrs. Preen—We should stage some thrift pageants.

Mrs. McAddle—Why don't we cut taxes so people can buy more?

NRS. FEDDUP—Mr. Chairman, this makes me want to scream. All I hear is that inflation's going to wreck the country if it's not stopped. Yet all we do is talk and argue.

Judge Pudd—Don't get hysterical, little lady. Things will work out if we leave them to the good old law of supply and demand that our founding fathers established.

Mr. Parrott—A lot of this inflation talk's just propaganda.

Chairman (rapping)—Let's get on to what can be done.

Mr. Trumpet—It's all a matter of production. People should work harder, also cut down on—I mean er-minimize—their — er-consumption.

Mrs. Joyner—Are you insinuating that we must eat less?

Mr. Trumpet—Oh, no, no! I mean—that is—er-adjust——

Mr. Whinny—That's politics! No free American should be asked to eat less.

Mrs. Feddup—At least not before November 2.

Chairman (rapping)—Keep to the subject, please.

Mr. Dare—I am Erasmus J. Dare, president of Atomic Age Citizens, Inc. If we let inflation lick us, we've lost the cold war. Stopping the boom and bust is our only hope of convincing the Politburo capitalism isn't on the skids.

Mr. Parrott—That talk smacks of Moscow.

Mrs. Feddup—If we ship food to Europe without bidding up prices here, everyone's got to sacrifice—consumers, farmers, packers, butchers, labor——

Mr. Whinny—And the monopoly price fixers.

Mr. Trumpet—That's demagogic politics!

Chairman (rapping) — Please — remember we are at Dunkirk.

MR. DARE—I move we get behind meat rationing.

Mr. Parrott—You can't legislate morals into people.

Mrs. Feddup — I'm going to scream!

Mrs. Joyner—I'm opposed to any rationing until after our organizations have their spring conventions, luncheons and banquets. Everyone is tired of chicken patties.

Mr. Dare—We should call off this mass eating during the meat crisis. It's our biggest form of waste.

Judge Pudd—With rationing, all the meat would go into the black market, and we'd be perfectly helpless about it.

Mrs. McAddle—Why would we?

Mr. Trumpet—I move we adjourn until November 3.

Mr. Whinny—I second the motion.

Mr. Dare—Wait! The peace of the world hangs on this. What will happen if we weaken our economy with another depression? Here's the biggest thing we can do to prevent war.

Mrs. Feddup—That's the point. Why aren't we doing it?

Judge Pudd—The little lady is right. We should be doing something. I move we demand of Congress a stronger national defense—more battleships, airplanes, armies, bombs——

A Chorus—Second the motion!

Mrs. Feddup — Is everybody crazy—or am I?

Iturbi Concert

On January 6 my two daughters and I had the very great pleasure of hearing Mr. Jose Iturbi in what, to our untrained ears, was a perfectly delightful program. When I read Mr. Hume's column in the morning paper stating that Mr. Iturbi's program "was little less than disgraceful," I felt moved to write and ask a question. What makes a program acceptable—the fact that it appeals to the majority of the audience (as was evidenced by their applause) or that one critic is satisfied? By the requests for encores from President Truman and others, it was apparent that many people wanted to hear what Mr. Hume is pleased to call "the old chestnuts."

The fact (as pointed out by Mr. Hume) that Mr. Iturbi "has appeared in a number of movies, etc.," was no doubt a drawing card. People came hoping to hear some of the old tried-and-true favorites and went away well rewarded.

I say "bravo" to Mr. Iturbi and any other great artist who has the good sense to appeal to the great majority of people who love good music and who still come back year after year to hear "the old chestnuts."

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Finletter Report

Lippmann

THE MAIN recommendation of the President's Air Policy Commission, of which Mr. Thomas K. Finletter is the chairman, is that we should start at once to make the Air Force capable of delivering a sustained assault at long range upon the industrial centers of the Soviet Union. The commission has found that under present conditions, that is to say while the country is at peace, the development of such a striking force could be accomplished in about four years, and would call for additional appropriations of about 24 billions over and above what we are now spending on the Army, the Navy, and the Air Force.

If we assume that the Army and Navy are not to be reduced while this strategic Air Force is being created, then for the five years, 1948-1952 inclusive, our military expenditures will be over 75 billion dollars. That is without universal military training. Apparently it is also without the very large sums which would be needed to sustain rapid and intensive research and development of the new weapons which are now in the experimental laboratories. It is also without the industrial measures, for example the synthetic development of oil, about which Secretary Krug testified this week.

THE FINLETTER commission has, however, been very careful not to recommend that this gigantic program be adopted now as a whole. What it recommends is that this program be begun this year and that at the end of the calendar year 1949—that is two years from now—it should be reviewed. It is, therefore, in fact, a two-year program which would cost about five billions extra. If this program is adopted now, we shall be in a position two years hence to proceed with the creation of the great Air Force. If it is not adopted now, then two years hence it will take two years longer before we could, without reimposing war controls, have in being such a force.

Thus the commission is recommending that we lay immediately the foundations of an Air Force capable of dominating the centers of Soviet power, and that, having laid the foundations, we review the situation—particularly our relations with Russia—two years hence. If they are decidedly better—as would be the case if a German peace treaty were in sight which provided for the evacuation of the European continent by all the armies of occupation—the tempo of the development of our strategic air power could then be reduced. If on the contrary our relations have become worse, we shall be technically prepared to accelerate the tempo of development.

THIS IS, it seems to me, a sound and a wise calculation if we can assume—a subject which the committee could not go into—that long range air power is treated as one element in, and not as a substitute for, a well conceived and well supported policy designed to bring about a settlement of the German war we have just fought and of the cold war with Russia we are now engaged in. This Air Force is not an alternative to the European Recovery Program. Seventy combat groups of airplanes will not give us peace or security or prosperity or protect the liberties of men if the great nations sink into squalor and disorder.

Nor is the strategic Air Force in itself a military panacea in the immediate diplomatic conflicts around the periphery of the Soviet orbit. For while it is the most certain way available to us of creating an effective balance of power against the use of the Red Army as an instrument of direct and open aggression, a long range Air Force with atomic bombs cannot be employed effectively to exert diplomatic pressure in the cold war.

FOR THE trouble with strategic air power is that weapons of annihilation can be used only as a last resort in total war. In all the intermediate phases of diplomacy and local and indirect conflict, as for example in the Balkans today, the weapon is too powerful to be used. For a weapon can be too powerful to be effective for its purpose: a traffic policeman with a 16-inch gun would not be an efficient traffic policeman.

In the actual situation today and for the two year period to which the Finletter commission's recommendations apply, the creation of the strategic Air Force is the best measure of security we can take so that the Kremlin will not consider using the army to invade western Europe and the Middle East. But for dealing with Tito, Markos and company—at Trieste or in the Greek mountains, the Navy, now in the Mediterranean, is a much more suitable, and therefore immediately the most effective, instrument to restrain, to warn, and to police.

FOR THE modern American Navy is a combination of all arms—but on a manageable scale in a period like this one;—when diplomacy requires enough of a show of force to make it convincing but not such tremendous force that it would never be used unless diplomacy had failed completely. The American Navy in the Mediterranean fits these specifications. Its air power, which is far short of a great Air Force with atomic bombs, is nevertheless quite capable of dominating Belgrade, Sofia, or the lines of communication into northern Greece. Its little army, the Marines, is capable of making a landing to show clearly that our warnings are serious. And the Navy is, of course, capable at any time of controlling ships at sea and any port, and any peninsula, and any island.

THE FACT that it can act without exterminating great masses of innocent people means that it is all the more likely to act. It can act if treaties and obligations are violated, if plain warnings are disregarded. It is, in respect to the diplomatic problem, a weapon of precision. The big Air Force is not a weapon of precision. It is usable only in a total war, and in building such an Air Force, as we should, this is the consideration we must never forget. For if we forget it, we shall not have increased our security but we shall be repeating the supreme error of powerful states—which is to think that power is a substitute for diplomacy, and that absolute power gives absolute security.

Third Party in Maryland Planned by Wallace Backers

Baltimore, Jan. 14 (AP).—The Maryland-for-Wallace committee today called a State convention for the purpose of forming a new political party and issued a statement indicating it might seek to make Maryland's news sales tax an issue in the fall campaign.

The convention was set for February 15 at the 104th Medical Regiment armory.

The committee's announcement said any group of 10 or more persons may send a delegate and delegates will be required to pay a $1 registration fee. Anyone may pay $1 and attend as an observer.

Of the sales tax, which was enacted by the 1947 General Assembly and became effective last July 1, the committee said:

"The sales tax in Maryland is a bitter reminder of an inequitable tax system which bears heaviest on those least able to pay."

The announcement indicated the convention will consider a name for the new party, adopt a constitution and by-laws, set up a slate of presidential electors, and consider if candidates should be entered in the State's congressional races.

"The voting records of the Democratic Congressmen, who voted down the line with the GOP, show a complete disregard of the people's needs," the committee said.

"Neither major political party will nominate a candidate who will carry forward the Roosevelt program.

Both Parties Criticized

"The Republican Party has long abandoned any pretense of serving the general welfare. And now the Democratic Party has become a party of Wall Street bankers and generals, with a foreign policy that can lead only to war."

It added that "nor can we ever expect either the Democratic or Republican Parties to make any serious attempts to eliminate segregation and discrimination in Maryland."

Under the State's election laws, a petition signed by 2000 persons must be filed with the Secretary of State before April 3 in order for any new party to have a place on the ballot.

Wallace Cancels Talk Before Pastors

Columbus, Ohio, Jan. 14 (AP).—Henry A. Wallace, third party candidate for President, today canceled his engagement to speak at the Ohio Pastor's Convention here January 28. The invitation was extended nearly two years ago.

Harold Young, secretary of the former vice president, explained in a telegram to the Ohio Council of Churches, sponsor of the convention, that "there might be political implications" in Wallace's remarks.

Royall Admits Army Spends Public Funds to 'Sell' UMT

By the United Press

Army Secretary Kenneth C. Royall admitted under questioning by House propaganda investigators yesterday that his department has been spending public funds to sell the American people on universal military training. But he said the Army had "no apology" to make.

"We would have been derelict in our duty if we had done anything less," he told a House executive expenditures subcommittee headed by Representative Forest A. Harness (R., Ind.).

Harness has charged that the Army still is spending "a lot of money" illegally to "propagandize" the public on UMT, despite previous protests from the committee. He called Royall on the carpet and inquired sharply whether the Armys' publicity campaign on the peacetime training program was designed to bring voter pressure on Congress to pass the UMT bill.

The questioning of Royall brought out that the Army recently picked up a $41.65 luncheon check for a group of women entertained at the Pentagon building. Royall contended that the party was "perfectly proper" and a "good investment" because the women were a "very representative group" taking part in the Army-sponsored organization backing universal military training.

Royall went on to say the Army "had not made, is not making and will not make any effort to influence legislation by illegitimate means." But he added that he would be "less than frank" if he denied that Army statements on the need for military training might influence Congress.

He said the Army has tried to give the public the facts about UMT just as it has tried to give the facts about the need for a strong peacetime Army, Navy and Air Force.

Dr. Donald Timerman of Columbus, Ohio, executive secretary of the Franklin County Council of Churches, testified about the citizens "advisory committees" of which Harness complained. Timerman said he resigned last October as chairman of the Ohio Army Advisory Committee because "there were so many evidences it was intended by the War Department as a propaganda agency to sell universal military training."

He added that his committee did "mighty little" advising. The Army officials, he said, "were anxious to tell us what was going one . . . and what to do about it."

Winning Mexican Migrants' Confidence Big Job in Texas

(This is the fourth of a series of articles on migratory farm labor.)

By Agnes E. Meyer

Winning the confidence of the Mexican migrant workers was the first and the biggest job of the Texas Farm Placement Extension Service which has been handling some 120,000 farm laborers every crop year.

The size of this task is apparent when you travel about among these Mexican families as they move out of the croplands and back toward the Rio Grande Valley.

With R. B. Hickerson, who has succeeded Dutch Hohn as director of the Texas Farm Placement Extension Service, and Carl Davenport, Texas farm labor agent, I motored some 400 miles during our first day's journey from Austin through Waco, and Brady to Sweetwater. We interviewed farmers, county agents, Texas Employment Service people, farm labor assistants, and late in the day, tired Mexican migrants pulling in their trucks for a night's halt at the various reception centers.

Cotton picking was finished in this area by the beginning of December. Most of the migrants are safely at home again in their Rio Grande headquarters. But many are still drifting back from places as far north as the Dakotas. Their trucks are loaded with a jumble of food, mattresses, clothing, stoves, pots, pans, and what not—just like the gypsy wagons we marveled at as children.

Tells of Effort for Confidence

As it was a drive of 110 miles from Austin to Waco, our first stop, Davenport, whom I had met on my last trip in the Rio Grande Valley when we scrambled around the mesquite to find the hideouts of the wetbacks, filled the time by telling me how hard it was at first to win the confidence of the Latin-American migrants.

"Mr. Hohn began his extension service operations by sending us into the home territory of the Texas Mexicans during the winter months. We visited with them in their homes, in the 'cantinas' at the Mexican picture houses, at the ball games and 'bailes' or dance grounds. The Mexicans were as suspicious of us, as of all Anglos. It was impossible for them to believe that a 'gringo' really wanted to be helpful. When we approached a group, they would fade away like a covey of quail.

"Then Pasqual Villareal, one of our Mexican field men, attached a loud speaker to his pick-up truck and rode through the streets on Sunday afternoon announcing a meeting in the local dance hall or theater. We'd go into their picture shows, stop the picture with permission of the manager, and tell them that the Extension Service men had the latest crop information, as to weather conditions, housing, wages, routes, everything that would interest a Texas-Mexican cotton picker. We invented an Extension Service insignia by which these illiterate, Spanish-speaking Americans could identify us as their friends. It was pasted on the windshields of the field cars. On big placards it was attached to the front or rear of our cars at highway intersections so that they could see it from the distance and stop for information. Our job was to build up faith in our knowledge and attitudes so that they would go where they were needed without question or loss of time.

Stress Contract Completion

"We stressed the importance of completing a contract so that they would stop running off and leaving the farmer with half his cotton in the field. We kept repeating 'see the county agent' for latest information. 'If rain comes or some other change in conditions,' we impressed upon them, 'he will tell you what to do.'

"It was slow, hard work but gradually the program made sense to them and began to click. They would check our statements one against the other and finding them identical, they began to believe in us. That meant they were not just listening but paying attention. You could read their thoughts as you sat in their homes and drank endless cups of pitch black coffee with them: 'Here was an American who spoke Spanish, patted the babies and asked about the mother's health.' They were not in a hurry 'but maybe these Extension Service men were telling the truth.' If these men were really honest, time would tell.

"As they began to open up, we found that a great deal of trouble lay with the farmer. Poor housing and discrimination were their chief complaints. Picture shows, stores, filling stations refused services. The police would not let them sleep on school grounds. Everywhere they were pushed around. The farmers and merchants were not wholly to blame. The answer lay in setting up rest stations or service centers that would take the load off community facilities. That meant education of local leaders, farmers, businessmen, church people and the clergy or any other interested group. The towns paid for the permanent construction. At the peak of the crop we put a farm labor assistant into each center to help the farmer get labor and to help the Mexican find a job. It worked so well that the farmer was tickled, the merchant was happy and the workers couldn't believe their eyes.

Spreads Like Wild Fire

As we motored along the seemingly endless highways, I realized what an advantage the few main intersections are to work of this kind. In south Texas, quarantine stations are placed at such intersections where every vehicle has to stop. The Extension Service had its own information stations at these and at the chief northern intersections where they could catch every migrant truck and give the crew leader the latest news on where to go and why. It was a surefire network from which even the most distrustful crew leaders could not escape. Such simple, obvious ideas as having a barrel of cold drinking water at these intersections, a great service for people traveling across south Texas in July and August, helped to win the naturally grateful hearts of these Latin-American people.

At Waco, one of the important intersections where one main road takes the migrants through Lubbock to the beet fields of Nebraska, Colorado and Wyoming and the other into the cotton fields of Arkansas and Mississippi, we talked over the future of farm labor placement at the local reception center with Steve Collins, the farm labor assistant to the McLennan County farm agent:

"Just across that stream in that little park is where the migrants used to camp," he said, pointing at some empty fields. "They were a sanitary problem. In self-defense, the town put up the reception center and the migrant grape vine soon made it known to all of them."

Quonset-Type Building

This rest station is the open shed, quonset-type of building with 2500 square feet of shelter space. It has a meeting hall of stucco 24 by 120 feet where the local department of education arranges movies, meetings and social gatherings, and where the migrants can sleep in bad weather. Equipment consists of sanitary conveniences for men and women, butane gas for cooking, hot and cold water, and electric lights. The electric washing machine which the women can use free of charge is a great educational feature once they get over their primitive distrust of new ideas.

"Our cotton is planted in a week and it all opens together, and then we need about 2500 extra workers," said Collins. "As a rule our picking season was 60 days. This year the reception center increased our efficiency and we got in the largest cotton crop since 1937 in 45 days.

"Workers in their schools, churches and other meeting places were given a detailed explanation on the plans of the Extension Service Farm Labor program and just how it applied to them in this locality. Slowly but steadily their confidence was gained and job placement became easier. Local labor picked 55 per cent of the crops, migrant workers the rest. Results of the planning and organization in the past were clearly shown in the quick gathering of our big crop this year—50,000 bales in about 45 days.

Report of Great Value

"The Extension Service's weekly farm labor report was of immense value in sending farm labor to other counties as soon as we had enough.

"Local crews were fed into the lower valley as soon as orders appeared for help. Crew leaders were requested to report to this office upon arrival and placement down there. Several of them cooperated by letter, giving condition of cotton, price paid, etc. This is further evidence of the effect of the educational campaign of the service with agricultural farm labor."

I asked Collins, a sensible, generous, balanced personality, whether he was going to work for the Texas Employment Service; now that that agency is taking over farm labor placement.

"I don't know. They haven't asked me to, yet. I have a farm of my own so I don't need a job. I worked for the Extension Service because it was public service for the war effort, for my country, for the migrants and for the 3000 or 4000 local agricultural workers whose time we filled between seasons with fencing, sodding and sheep-shearing.

"I think all Extension Service workers are fair-minded people. We'll help the Texas Employment Service, if we can and they want us to. We're willing to try. If they turn us loose, we'll be able to do the job. But we're a little skittish about it. Certainly the farmers are not going to the Employment Service offices. The brisk receptionists scare them to death. And the migrants will look to the actual people they know and have learned to trust. They don't know anything about who has what job. They know Dutch Hohn or Davenport and Hickerson there or me or the county agents and field men because we've worked with them day and night. They'll come here to the reception center, not to the employment office, to get advice on routes and crops and wages just the way they did. How the employment service people with their rules and regulations, are going to fit into all this, I don't know."

How Can They Do It?

As I looked at Steve Collins, a middle-aged, two-fisted, sensible and very individualistic farmer-type, I felt in his mind the questions I was asking myself: "How can young civil service clerks, such as sit in the local offices of the Employment Service, tell this experienced, practical man anything, let alone how to manage farm labor? How can these same clerks, most of whom cannot speak Spanish, reach out into the highways and direct the complicated network of information, guidance and kindly protection which the Extension Service has flung across the vast plains of Texas and into the States to the north, east and west? And what will happen if the U.S.E.S. cannot maintain this controlled migration, not only to food production but to these thousands upon thousands of Mexican workers who for the first time have learned to trust the word and the good intentions of the Anglo-American?"

As we took off from Waco to Brady, another jump of 150 miles, Davenport continued his reminiscences:

"Let me just give you an idea of the kind of things that have to be done to keep these migrants on the job.

Courthouse Only Haven

"Last September as we were in the middle of the cotton season in the Gulf Coast area, we began to get reports of a storm coming straight from the Gulf—and they come rough and tough out of that old Gulf. We had 2000 migrants in the Port Lavaca area. I knew they'd pack up and go in all directions if I didn't find a safe place to put them before they found out that the storm was going to hit. The only safe place big enough was the county courthouse.

"The officials objected—said the migrants would mess it up. The planters will lose their cotton, I argued, if the workers leave. As the officials are elected by the big growers, they yielded grudgingly. A telephone call from Corpus Christi said the storm would hit in five hours with a velocity of 135 to 150 miles. With some of crew leaders helping, we got the word over miles of territory to every worker to make for the 'Casa Courte.' Some 1200 cotton pickers jammed into the place. Gins were blown to shreds, labor houses disappeared in the air, brick and steel structures were demolished, but the courthouse took it and not a single Mexican cotton picker was hurt.

"As the storm subsided, I called the crew leaders together and explained that the premises must not be left dirty. There wasn't even a cigarette butt on the floor when they left the place. The next day I funneled all those workers over to Victoria and El Campo where there was less damage and cotton pickers were badly needed.

"This is the kind of emergency work it takes to get 'better and fuller utilization of labor" Davenport said thoughtfully. "It can't be done by a clerk who watches the clock move toward 5 p. m.; nor by an organization that is closed up from Saturday noon until Monday morning. It can only be accomplished by men who know Mexican laborers by living with them in their homes, on the highways and in the fields, men who understand and sympathize with their reactions, hopes and ambitions."

(Tomorrow: Workers, employers equally fearful of results of placement transfer.)

One on the Aisle—

Costello Worm Turns

'Wistful Widow' Learns Respect

By Richard L. Coe

PRACTICALLY NOTHING ON EARTH is simpler than writing about an Abbott and Costello picture. The boys are as familiar as pretzels, and by the time one is 3, one has made up one's mind about pretzels. Unlike Katisha, Abbott and Costello are not an acquired taste.

Now the boys are back at Keith's in an adventure which boasts one of the happiest titles of the season—"The Wistful Widow of Wagon Gap." With Marjorie Main as the predatory female, this comedy gave your foolish reporter many a laugh yesterday afternoon. If you would escape into the ridiculous, you'll find this good fun.

"The Wistful Widow of Wagon Gap" (it's such a good title one enjoys writing it) opens with one of those shots of the great open spaces you've seen a thousand times. Across the screen is a brief prologue—"Montana: In the days when men were men." And after you've read it through six or eight times, another phrase is added—"with two exceptions."

Wagon Gap, it seems, is one of those places the stage coach avoids. There's feudin', fightin' an' afussin' in the street all the time and the place ain't safe, it ain't. Lou (the fat one) obeys Bud's instructions to fire into the air. He brings down the vilest of the vile and Wagon Gappers are impressed. There has to be a trial, though, and Lou is burdened with supporting the widder of the late Mr. Hawkins.

The Widow Marjorie

Marjorie Main's widow is, as you must have guessed, a female to be feared. Eventually Lou gets the idea that Wagon Gap will fear him purely on the grounds that he's Marjorie's property. This makes him a sheriff to be respected. How he gets Marjorie to respect him is the rest of the story.

Much of the fun of this comedy comes from the worm who has turned. It's distinctly pleasant to find fat Lou finally feared by the rest of the bipeds. He swaggers into a saloon—where milk is his drink—and quells a riot. He heroically conducts himself in a dastardly planned holdup.

Lou's earlier adventures are more consistent with his browbeaten past. One of Marjorie's gawky kids plants a frog in his soup—an intelligent, almost talkative frog who knows how to put Lou in his place. There's also a dog in Wagon Gap who knows how to handle any rebellion on Lou's part.

While this burlesque of the time-honored western picture may not make the most of its potentialities (for there are dry stretches), satire never has been an Abbott-Costello speciality. When they have their fun with something, they throw it at you in chunks. That's what they're doing here, simply panning for obvious laughs.

True, Abbott-Costello fans don't have to be told this, but those who've picked up distaste of the pair from their radio programs should be reminded that, like Ed Wynn, say, Lou and Bud are visual comics. Their humor is broad and obvious, but it also is sure and well-timed. Though Bud Abbott may once in a while tire of playing straight man to Lou's expansive gestures, he holds up his end of the partnership expertly.

Fire Department Short

While the idea of Miss Main as the wistful widow is possibly funnier than the actual playing makes her, she's a hearty partner for the boys. The others in the cast are wholehearted. The William of that curious last name—Ching—is the ostensible hero and Gordon Jones the chief villain.

With the ridiculous as the bill's keynote, Keith's has one more fine short from "This Is America" series, "Smoke Eaters." This one details the workings of fire departments, both professional and volunteer, and it's a mighty interesting subject. At a time when our own fire department is so much in the news, "Smoke Eaters" is revealingly instructive. It's an understanding film on a vital safeguard one is always in danger of taking too much for granted.

One of those Woody Woodpecker cartoons, "Giant Killer," strikes a chord of recognition, for another of the cartoon series had something very like it recently. But it's fun—as indeed is the new Keith bill in general.

"THE WISTFUL WIDOW OF WAGON GAP." Universal-International release produced by Robert Arthur. Screenplay by Robert Lees, John Grant and F. T. Rinaldo. Directed by Charles T. Barton. At RKO-Keith's.

2 Montgomery Officials Sued

Jo V. Morgan, Bethesda lawyer and Montgomery County Civil Service Commissioner, yesterday filed a $50,000 libel suit against two Montgomery County officials.

Defendants were listed as Irving G. McNayr, the county's administrative head, and Brooke Johns, president of the county commissioners. The suit was filed in Montgomery Circuit Court.

In a pretrial deposition, McNayr testified he wrote a county press release that accused Morgan of "dilatory service," and Johns admitted authorizing the statement. The release was issued as an explanation of the county board's action reducing Morgan's salary from $4800 to $1200.

Plans Test on Property Tax

To W. Lawson King, wealthy Montgomery County dairy farmer, his county personal property tax bill of $386 is $386 too much—and he won't pay.

Theowner of five dairy farms on 1100 acres of land accordingly took the lead yesterday in a minor tax rebellion to kill such taxation.

"I'm opposed to the personal property tax," declared King. "I think it's unconstitutional, and I'm going to fight it."

He said he "welcomed" recent inclusion of his name on a list of 100 persons delinquent in 1946 tax payment which county commissioners turned over on Tuesday to their legal staff for court action. James H. Pugh, former State's attorney, was retained by King to press the case.

Francis K. Metzger, assistant supervisor of assessments, admitted yesterday that "numerous" other farmers had told him they were following King's lead and were refusing to pay.

Policeman Praised For Clegg Arrest

two recommendations to the District Commissioners. The first urged a grand jury investigation, which refused to indict the policemen on assault charges. The second recommendation was that the case be dropped, because the charges could not be sustained before a police trial board. The Commissioners, nonetheless, ordered the trial board hearing.

Questioned by Defense Counsel Charles E. Ford, the police superintendent testified that the police practice of arrest for "investigation" or "suspicion" ran back as far as 1865. The charge of "investigation," he said, is carried "in different ways not only here but all over the rest of the country."

Chief Barrett said the various precincts used to have different methods of controlling the "investigation" prisoner as to permitting him to contact his family. But, the chief added, he drew up written regulations and forms in July and sent them to the printers on July 29.

On cross-examination by Assistant Corporation Oliver Gasch, Barrett was asked: "On the basis of what information do you feel that Clegg committed an offense."

By this question and others, the Assistant Corporation Counsel sought to develop that Clegg had not committed any offense in regard to Mrs. Haynes, and also that while an officer may arrest on reasonable belief that a felony had been committed, in the case of a misdemeanor, the officer would have to see the action in order to make an arrest without a warrant.

The police chief said that there was a complaint about the waitresses being molested by a colored man who fitted the description of Clegg. "I do feel that if that car hadn't come along, there probably would have been rape committed," Major Barrett testified. "That car" referred to an auto which was driving slowly behind Clegg and Mrs. Haynes at the time of the arrest incident.

"I can't actually say an offense was committed that morning," the police chief explained. "We have hundreds of cases a month. Our job is as much to prevent crime."

Assistant Corporation Counsel Gasch then asked the police chief: "Do you distinguish between arrests for investigation on felonies and on misdemeanors?"

"Do I have to answer that?" asked Major Barrett. "It's a question a whole lot is being made over now."

Barrett said then he'd rather not answer the question, inasmuch as Gasch was a member of the corporation counsel's office, and as such must serve as his counsel in legal questions rising out of the "investigation" practice.

"I don't want to embarrass you then," said Prosecutor Gasch, withdrawing the question. Defense Counsel Ford protested that the chief had not been "embarrassed" and was within his rights in not answering the question. Ford added: "Major, the District and the department can be proud of you."

Other highlights of the trial yesterday:

Capt. Robert C. Pearce, of No. 1 Precinct, said he felt Private Gibboney was "justified" in making the arrest. Asked if he thought detention of Clegg for 34 hours was also justifiable, Captain Pearce replied: "The nature of the complaint makes the suspect a desperate person . . . dangerous . . ." As such, 34 hours detention was not "an unusual length" of time. He added that since Clegg was arrested five months ago, there have been no complaints of women being molested in that area.

Charles E. Davis, jr., Washington Post reporter, testified that he did not notice swelling or cuts on the face of Clegg on August 5, three days after the alleged beating by police.

Mrs. Gussie Clegg testified she married Julius Willie Clegg April 2, 1941, in Rocky Mount, N. C., without a license before a minister she was unable to identify. Under questioning of the board, she stated she had also married and not divorced a man named Williams.

Trial will resume at 9 a. m. today in the Municipal Center.

U. S. Employe Held Guilty In Abortion

Harold DeFreest Miller, 46-year-old Bureau of Standards laboratory worker, was found guilty in District Court yesterday of performing an abortion which resulted in the death of a 26-year-old woman.

The jury of 11 men and one woman deliberated nearly six hours before returning the verdict. They had to be given additional instructions by Justice Edward M. Curran before coming to an agreement.

Miller, who lives at 1604 Q st. nw., was committed to the District jail pending sentencing at a future date. He faces a maximum sentence of 20 years.

The abortion, with which he was charged, was performed October 20 on Miss Agnes M. Blume, a receptionist for the Remington-Rand Co. She was admitted to Emergency Hospital October 23 and died there three days later.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

A FELLOW named George Marshall is trying to make a production out of the signing of Harry Gilmer by the Redskins, a coming event with all the breath-taking suspense of opening a box of crackerjacks, in anticipation of what gives inside.

POVICH

That Gilmer agreed days and days ago to join the Redskins was disclosed by Branch Rickey, and the ceremonies that Marshall has announced for Sunday don't even qualify as an anticlimax. Yet the Redskins' front office has been surrounding the signing story with a passel of the old, stale props of press-agentry.

The site of Gilmer's meeting with Marshall and his retinue is not being disclosed. The Redskins are shushing even the method of Gilmer's transportation to Washington. There have been hints that Gilmer will arrive by pumpkin chariot and step forth in a long black cloak to be whisked by four white horses to a bosky dell fortified by road blocks to frustrate All-America Conference spies.

And then on Monday they will announce that Gilmer has signed a Redskin contract. The race bookies would call the whole thing past-posting.

IN THE SIGNING of Gilmer, it could be wondered what the Redskins have to be so proud about, and the 72,000 who saw the last Sugar Bowl game at New Orleans could ask the same question. On that day, young Gilmer and his Alabama team were lucky to get a touchdown in their 27-7 beating by Texas. Gilmer threw 12 passes that afternoon. You might say he completed three, and you might say he completed two.

Gilmer was given credit for completing three passes, including the pass that got Alabama its lone touchdown, but that one calls for explanation. Actually the pass that Gilmer threw for a touchdown was intercepted on the goal line by a Texas back, and was wrestled away from him by an Alabama man in the end zone.

Few well-touted stars ever had as bad a day in a big game as did Gilmer, but that fact would hardly scare the pro football people off. They've seen Baugh and Luckman and McAfee have their sorry days on the gridiron, too, with no loss of faith in them. Gilmer has been a stand-out college football player for three years and could be a powerful help to the Redskins' backfield.

THE REDSKINS will face a decision when training starts next season—whether to groom Gilmer as an alternate to Sammy Baugh in the quarterback-passing role or fit him into the team's running attack. Gilmer, for all his fame as a passer, is a ball-carrier of ability as well, and the Redskins' need of running backs was painfully apparent to Washington fans last year, if gleefully obvious to the opposition.

In joining the Redskins, Gilmer moves into a T-formation team. All of his college experience has been with the modified single-wing of Alabama, whose backs line up in the Rockne box formation and get the ball on the direct pass from center. The pro football people know that you don't make a T-formation quarterback in one season, particularly of a man who hasn't played the "T," and may use Gilmer as a halfback.

With Sammy Baugh still available and as deft as ever with the T-quarterbacking job and passing, there is no desperate need for an understudy this year. Baugh has been hinting that he may retire after one more season, and thus Gilmer represents quarterback insurance, but at the price they are paying for him the Redskins scarcely will rate Gilmer as a bench warmer next season.

IT'S ALL PRETTY discouraging news for Jimmy Youel, who has been understudying Baugh the last two seasons and now finds added competition in the figure of Gilmer. It's reported that Youel wants off the Redskins and has asked to be traded to another club where he is not in the shadow of Baugh and could play football with some regularity to prove he is entitled to more money.

When Jack Jacobs, the former Redskin who is now with Green Bay, encountered Coach Turk Edwards at New Orleans a few weeks ago, he offered to wager that Youel wouldn't be with the Redskins next year. "If that's so, you know more than I do," said Edwards hotly, but he didn't take the bet.

Eventually, it will be Gilmer who will end up in Baugh's quarterback spot on the Redskins, and that is one factor in his decision to sign with the Washington club. Down in New Orleans he told his friends, "I've played the single-wing all my life, and I'd like to take a fling at the T-formation in the pro league. I think I'll like it."

Hertzberg's 13 Points in Last Period Clinch Game

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

The Washington Capitols came from behind to score a 75-67 victory over the Chicago Stags, Western Division Basketball Association of America leaders, before 3251 customers at Uline Arena last night.

With his team trailing by three points as the last period opened, Sonny Hertzberg piloted the Caps to their victory, dropping in all 13 of his points in the last period.

The victory was Washington's second over the Stags in four meetings and whittled the Stag lead over the fourth place Caps to 2½ games.

Both Start Slowly

Not until the last 35 seconds of the 12-minute first period were the Stags able to register a goal.

That one came from Genevance, late of Illinois' Whiz Kds, who arched one n from side court.

The Caps, meanwhile, were no balls of fire themselves, but they did manage to break through the Stag defense for five baskets and three free throws and led, 13-8, as the quarter ended.

Edge at Halftime

Picking up steam, the Stags took the lead, 34-32, just before the half ended. With the score knotted, 32-32, Stan Miasek was shoved by McKinney four seconds before the buzzer sounded and Stan dropped in both throws to give Chicago its two-point lead.

Miasek, the league's third leading scorer last year, was held to two free throws in the first quarter by Irv Torgoff, but Torgoff, who committed his fifth personal foul early in the period, was removed and Miasek cashed in on his absence, scoring nine points. Zaslofsky, also held to two free throws in the first period by Freddie Scolari, broke out of those shackles, too, and chipped in six points for the visitors.

Trip to South Bend Social, Says Hamilton

Capt. Tom Hamilton, who'll soon be Navy's athletic director, returned to Annapolis yesterday and denied that he had offered the Academy's head football coaching job to Frank Leahy of Notre Dame.

"I was in South Bend purely and only to attend the Notre Dame football banquet and not to employ a football coach," Hamilton said.

"I do not wish to be involved in a guessing game involving Navy's new football coach and I don't know the answer," said the 1947 Navy head coach.

Hamilton attributed Navy's new policy of employing a civilian professional football coach to the fact that "we do not have anyone in the Navy trained at this time to take over as coach."

"In fairness to my coaching staff and myself, I feel that some of the implications in the papers regarding this change are not fair. I do not feel that the reason for our lack of victories the past two years can be blamed on coaching inadequacy. Nor is that the reason why we are departing from the graduate system. It is merely the fact that due to the war we do not have anyone in the Navy trained at this time to take over as coach.

"With the support of the superintendent and the Navy I feel quite certain that we are going ahead to put the Navy in its proper top position in football."

Nats Purchase Murray, Sign Three Rookies

The Nats yesterday purchased Lefthander Joe Murray from Bridgeport, Conn., and also announced receipt of the signed contracts of two other rookies.

Murray won 14 games and lost only 9 for the Class B Colonial League entry. His victories included four shutouts and one winning streak of nine in a row.

Signed contracts were received from Infielder Cal Ermer, who finished out the season with the Nats at second base in 1947, and Pitcher Dick Welteroch, right-hander, a teammate of Murray's at Bridgeport.

Ermer managed Washington's Class B Charlotte team in the Tri-State League the last month of the year and then joined the Nats. He batted .289 for Charlotte.

Loyola Beats Catholic U.

Loyola College's Greyhounds of Baltimore tightened their grip on first place in the Mason-Dixon Conference as they easily defeated Catholic University's Cardinals 72-50, last night before 1500 fans at the C. U. gym.

Loyola coasted to victory on the strength of the brilliant play of big Jim Lacy, who last year was the Nation's second highest point producer.

Before he was removed from the game with 10 minutes left, Lacy had tossed in 22 points, and set up most of his team's other points with his smooth passing.

With Mike Zedalis tossing in three baskets to lead the way, Loyola moved to a 12-7 lead after 10 minutes of the first period. But three minutes later, the Cardinals pulled up to trail by only 17-18.

Then Loyola's Jim Lacy, who had been able to score only twice from the floor, began to hit his mark, and the Grey Hounds extended their margin to 32-24 at halftime. Lacy had tallied 11 points for Loyola, and Chuck Dudley had counter for eight for the Cardinals.

Didrikson Again Voted Top Athlete

New York, Jan. 14 (AP).—Mrs. Mildred Babe Didrikson Zaharias, the Texas tomboy who became the first American to win the British women's golf championship, today was named woman athlete-of-the-year for 1947 in the annual Associated Press poll.

It was the fourth time she had won the title in the 17-year history of the year-end vote and the third time in a row.

Only one of the 57 sports editors who participated in the poll, placed another woman ahead of the Babe. That one ballot was cast for Louise Suggs of Lithia Springs, Ga., the United States women's amateur golf queen, who finished in a fourth-place tie.

Babe Stands Alone

In gaining the title for the fourth time, Babe clearly outdistanced the field. Her point total of 280, on the basis of five points for first, three for second and one for third, was more than three times as large as the 87 points for runnerup Ann Curtis, the AAU swimming champion.

Mrs. Zaharias, the wife of a Denver sports promoter but formerly a Texan, first was named athlete-of-the-year back in 1932 as a track star. Taking up golf comparatively late in her career, she soon overshadowed other women competitors. She had turned pro but was reinstated as an amateur golfer, winning national championships and climaxing her play by the British win.

Shortly after her return from Britain, the Babe again turned professional. She was upset in the Texas Open by Bettye Mims White but announced later she would attempt to enter the National Open and compete against the men in 1948.

Curtis No. 1 in 1944

Ann Curtis, who led the Crystal Plunge Swimming Club of San Francisco to AAU triumphs, had little competition for second place. None of the editors named her first but she was runnerup to the Babe on most ballots. She was named No. 1 feminine athlete in 1944.

Pauline Betz of Los Angeles won the women's indoor tennis title last winter and also competed on the Riviera before she turned pro to take third place with 23 points. Miss Betz announced May 1 she was turning professional to make a tour with Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Cooke.

The leading women athletes, ranked on the basis of five points for a first place vote, three for second and one for third (first place votes in parentheses):

Mildred Zaharias (56)	280
Ann Curtis, swimming	87
Pauline Betz, tennis	23
Louise Suggs, golf (1)	20
Louise Brough, tennis	20

Others who received one or more points: Mildred Burke, wrestling, 9; Barbara Ann Scott, skating, 6; Zoe Ann Olsen, swimming; Patty Berg, golf; Nancy Merki, swimming; Nel Van Vliet, swimming, each 3; Margaret Osborne duPont, tennis, 2; Alice Marble, tennis; Evelyn Chandler, skating; Doris Hart, tennis; Frankie Groves, football, each 1.

Navy Outlasts Terps In Rough Tussle, 51-47

Annapolis, Jan. 14.—Navy outlasted Maryland here this afternoon, 51-47, in a rough and tumble game that saw three Terrapin stars banished on personnal fouls.

The Middies secured a 26-23 halftime edge and held it throughout the second half, staving off a late Maryland rally that brought the losers within two points in the last three minutes.

Ed Waller's long shot cut Navy's lead to 48-46, but, after 90 seconds, Navy's John Barrow tapped in a rebound and Bob Searle, high for the winners with 18 points, made a free throw just before the game ended.

Only point the Terps made in the last three minutes was a foul shot by Bernie Smith, who led Maryland's offense with 14.

In all, 44 personals were called and Maryland lost Center Bill Brown, Guard Al Lann and Forward Bill Wanish. The usually accurate Wanish failed to get a basket and scored only one point.

Navy Off on Fouls

Behind Smith for the Terrapins was Forward Johnny Edwards who made three field goals and six fouls. Runnerup to Sarle for Navy scoring honors was Guard Woods who scored five baskets before he committed his fifth personal.

Maryland converted 17 of 23 foul throws while Navy missed 11 of 24. The Middies made four more field goals, however.

Huskies Keep Odell Signing Deep Secret

SEATTLE, Jan. 14 (AP).—Athletic Director Harvey Cassill returned today from his Eastern quest for a University of Washington football coach with a "no comment" on published reports that Coach Howie Odell of Yale is the man.

In response to a direct question about the Seattle Times report that Odell would be the choice, Cassill replied:

"I can only answer by saying without reeservations that to this minute we have no agreement with any coach.

Negroes Barred

Richmond, Calif., Jan. 14 (AP). Two Los Angeles Negro golfers, Bill Spiller and Ted Rhodes, will not be permitted to compete in the Richmond Open tournament, George Schneiter, PGA tournament representative, said today.

The contract between the PGA and Richmond sponsors specifies that the first 60 finishers in the Los Angeles open automatically qualify for the Richmond event. Pat Markovich, tournament director, accepted their entries but Schneiter said the names could not be recognized.

Brown on Line

NEW YORK, Jan. 14 (AP).—Bobby Brown, pinch-hitting star of the 1947 world series who is sometimes called Manager Bucky Harris' problem child, has signed his contract for 1948 along with Steve Souchock, who is being brought back from Kansas City, the Yankees announced today.

GW Noses Out Duke, 48-47

Durham, N.C., Jan. 14.—Colonial Art Cera was hero and near-goat tonight as George Washington University trimmed Duke University, 48-47, before 4500 here in as wild and thrilling a finish as Duke's indoor stadium has seen in years.

With 18 seconds remaining in the game, Blue Devil Dick Gordon fouled Cerra as he was dashing under for a lay-up, and the cool Colonial sank his first free toss to break a 47-47 deadlock with what turned out to be the winning point.

George Washington waived Cerra's second chance and took the ball out of bounds.

The freeze nearly missed fire. With 1 second remaining on the clock, Duke's Capt. Doug Ausbon tied up Cerra on the sidelines and a technical foul was called on the newly-crowned hero, but Duke missed the foul try.

Eligibility in Doubt, But . . .

Navy's Gerber Will Transfer To Florida U. This Season

Myron Gerber, the Arlington, Va., boy who played three years of varsity football at the Naval Academy before he resigned last month, expects to play fullback for the University of Florida next season, The Washington Post learned yesterday.

The 21-year-old Gerber will enroll next Wednesday at the Gainesville, Fla., school.

However, there is some question over Gerber's eligibility status. Dr. M. W. Dougherty, acting commissioner of the Southeastern Conference, told The Washington Post last night from Knoxville, Tenn.

"I can't define Gerber's eligibility until I have all the facts in the case. However, the conference ruled last year that transfered athletes would be eligible to participate in athletics only after they had completed a year of studies at the conference school they wished to play for.

"It was decided that West Point and the Naval Academy would be considered just as any other college".

Poole Case Cited

Referring to the case of Barney Poole, who resigned from West Point and played varsity football at Mississippi, a Southern Conference school, last season, Mr. Dougherty said:

"Poole was declared eligible because it was learned that he had attempted to resign from West Point and enroll at Mississippi before the Southeastern Conference made the transfer ruling."

Gerber said he would begin classes February 9 and would continue through the summer. That would give him the equivalent of a year's studies, he said, and would according to word from Florida's Coach Raymond (Bear) Wolf, make him eligible by September.

The former Washington-Lee High and Bullis Prep star will be married on Sunday in Washington. His bride will be his high school sweetheart, Miss Elizabeth Newald, who lives in Orlando, just 100 miles from the University of Florida.

It was her dad, who helped clear the way for Gerber's admission to the school. Myron received the final okay Monday in a letter from Coach Wolf.

Could a Publicity Man Be 'Joker' in USC Card Trick?

Los Angeles, Jan. 14 (AP).—The question of who sneaked a movie advertisement into the University of Southern California's Rose Bowl rooting section puzzled Trojan student authorities today.

The Culver City Star-News said someone had smuggled a joker into the deck of card trick diagrams, with the result that a stunt supposed to portray the profile of Bob Chappuis, Michigan's redoubtable halfback, turned out this way:

"See 'The Paradine Case.'"

"The Paradine Case" was produced by Selznick Studio but an official there today disclaimed any foreknowledge of it.

The Selznick man said he "understood" that several other studios had been approached by an unidentified student who offered to thus publicize their current pictures for a flat $2500.

Ruth $80,000 Salary Still Tops

By Joe Reichler

NEW YORY, Jan. 14 (AP).—The gold-ink signing seasons of 1947 and 1948 have presented one puzzling question to figure-minded baseball fans: "Was Babe Ruth's $80,000 salary in 1930 tops or not?

What with bonus clauses and expense money added to regular earnings, salaries based on attendance, undisclosed figures on documents and difference in monetary values, it is doubtful whether this question ever will be settled to the satisfaction of all concerned.

When the late Col. Jacob Ruppert, owner of the New York Yankees, signed the Babe to a contract calling for $80,000 18 years ago, he boldly predicted that never again would anyone else see a ballplayer make that much money in one season.

There was no questioning Ruppert's prophecy—until last year. First, Bobby Feller, Cleveland's great pitcher, was reported to have signed a contract that gave him an opportunity to better Ruth's top salary.

Then, Hank Greenberg, after changing his mind about quitting baseball, finally came to terms with Pittsburgh for a salary reported to range from $65,000 all the way to $100,000. That included bonuses based on attendance, ability to play so many games, etc.

Recently President Bill Veeck of the Indians announced that Feller made $87,000 in 1947. That was exactly $7000 more than the Babe got in his most profitable year.

However, Veeck revealed that his strike-out king actually received only $42,000 in regular salary. Some $40,000 was paid him as a bonus based on attendance and Feller drew $5000 of this income as expense money.

It was estimated that Bob would have to pay about $52,000 of this salary to the Government in taxes, leaving him about $35,000 clear. On the other hand, Ruth handed over less than $10,000 to Uncle Sam in 1930, leaving him with around $70,000 net. In addition, the home run king of all time got an additional 10 per cent of the exhibition take. That has been estimated at around $25,000.

Ted Williams, the Boston Red Sox' heavy-hitting outfielder, is in top money brackets too. Ted was reported to have signed for $75,000 last year. The other day, following a long-distance talk with General Manager Joe Cronin, Williams sent a telegram to the Fenway Park offices confirming his acceptance for the coming season.

Since Williams undoubtedly received a boost following his fine '47 season when he led the American League in batting, runs batted in and home runs, it is believed that his 1948 salary will be in the neighborhood of $80,000.

Another star performer who might approach Ruth's top figure in a year or two is the Yankees' Joe DiMaggio. Following his selection as the American League's most valuable player in '47, DiMaggio received a tremendous increase in pay. He received $43,750 last year. Although no figures were revealed, Joe's '48 salary was guessed at anywhere from $60,000 to $75,000.

Armed Odds-On Choice in $25,000 Gulfstream Handicap

Bill Bennings

At Gulfstream.

Dear Folks:

Armed goes after the chief portion of 25 grand on the final program at Gulfstream. If the Calumet ace should blow there's going to be a lot of broke people around Miami because they are expecting him to run off and hide from the opposition. Various lines have him at odds of 1-5 up to 2-5. Personally, I see no reason why Armed can't beat the opposition. But with 130 pounds and giving away up to 26 pounds to his rivals, things can happen, even to a good horse. Regardless, there will be plenty of sharpshooters around willing to take interest on their money in the show hole. Which reminds me, I know a fellow who was a "lock" show bettor. He used to think nothing of dropping in a couple of grand third on a big-time horse. However, he sent in $500 to show one day at Pimlico on the Calumet entry of Miss Keeneland and Twilight. They were both out of the money—the only time one of the pair didn't get in the pay circle during the year! By the way, Armed won the Gulfstream handicap last year carrying 129 pounds and he will have his regular boy, Doug Dodson, in the saddle. We shall see what we shall see.

Calumet Ace Gives Weight To 7 Rivals

Miami, Fla., Jan. 14 (AP).—Calumet Farm's Armed, an odds-on favorite, makes his first big effort of the year tomorrow toward regaining world leading money honors among the thoroughbreds when he goes in the $25,000 Gulfstream Park Handicap, closing day feature of the "Track Beside the Sea."

Seven others were named overnight for the 1¼-mile event, but three of the seven also were entered in the seventh race and indications were that the field might be reduced to five or less horses.

Others named to buck Armed, who will carry 130 pounds, and their jockeys, are Incline, 110, no boy; Wide Wing, 109, R. J. Martin; Bug Juice, 108, C. McCreary; Rampart, 108, no boy; Respingo, 108, J. Stout; Eb, 106, L. M. Jones, and Sublime, 104, F. A. Smith.

Sublime, Respingo and Incline also were entered in the $4500 seventh race.

Armed, winner of an early race at Gulfstream this year in which he collected $2,200, will be ridden by Doug Dodson who has piloted the 7-year-old gelding in most of his races.

The Calumet star's earnings now total $767,700, and the leading Stymie, $816,060. The Gulfstream event will mean $20,650 to the winner if all eight horses start.

While conceding big hunks of weight, Armed will go to the post an odds-on favorite. He has been training daily at Hialeah under Trainer Jimmy Jones and is believed to be close to peak condition.

The track which was muddied by a downpour of rain during the night was drying out rapidly under a stiff wind today and indications were it would be "good" for the finale.

Armed won the handicap last year, setting a track record of 2::01 4/5 in beating his stablemate, Pot O'Luck.

Pompeian Triumphs In Gulfstream Mud

Gulfstream Park, Fla., Jan. 14 (AP).—With Warren Wright's faultless a belated withdrawal from the 6-furlong dash, Mrs. J. R. Steinman's mud-loving Pompeian plowed his way to a three-lengths triumph in today's Tavernier Purse.

Mrs. Dodge Sloane's Music took the place by four lengths, then came L. J. Hollenbach's odds-on choice, Roi Rouge, to finish a disappointing third. The latter had won his last four starts. In the absence of Faultless, who was scratched, he was considered something of a cinch by the crowd of 11,420. He had recovered from a recent slight attack of colic and went postward a 3-to-4 chance.

Armory Bill Asks 4-Man Control Unit

A bill which would establish a four-man control commission for the National Guard Armory was introduced yesterday by Representative Joseph O'Hara (R., Minn.).

O'Hara's bill would place control of the Armory in the hands of a commission composed of the commanding general of the District Guard, the President of the D. C. Board of Commissioners, the president of the Board of Trade and the president of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association.

The O'Hara bill would place full control of the Armory in the hands of the commission, subject to approval of the District Guard commander on matters of National Guard affairs and Guard security.

La Salle Guns for 12th Against G. U. Tonight

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Undefeated La Salle College of Philadelphia, one of the strongest college basketball teams scheduled to appear here this season, meets Georgetown 8:45 tonight at the Armory.

The visitors, gunning for their twelfth straight victory, already have humbled Utah, last year's national tournament champion, Southern California, Arkansas and Lafayette.

Oddly, La Salle, considered the top squad in basketball-conscious Philadelphia, had its closest call against little Loyola of Baltimore before squeezing a 64-62 early-season triumph.

High scorer for the Explorers is Larry Foust, towering 6-foot-9 center, who has amassed 156 pounts. La Salle has a team reputation, however, and any of four or five men take turns at leading the offense.

Other standouts include Joe Greenberg, Bill Gallagher and little Bob McCann. McCann, only 5 foot 8, was named to the All-City team as a freshman last season and seems a cinch to take All-State honors.

Coach Charley McGlone, who steered the team to a 19-5 record in his first year last season, appears to have a solid future. Capt. Fred Bernhardt is the only senior on the squad and 13 of the 16 members are sophomores. And then there's an undefeated freshman team that's said to be a good match for the varsity.

The only player who isn't a Philadelphia product is Center Earl Steigerwalt of Tamaqua, Pa.

Incidentally, Captain Bernhardt broke his wrist in December and made his first appearance on Tuesday night when La Salle romped over Scranton, 73-48.

One Man's Family:

All Haights Not Related, Haight Finds

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

MY FAN MAIL which reached a high of two letters a day when I was pinch-hitting for Shirley Povich, returned to normalcy yesterday.

Haight

The lone communication was from "J. K. McG." who wants to know two things (1); if I'm related to Clyde Haight who once played the outfield for Sacramento in the Pacific Coast League, (2) if I'm of the family for whom Haight st. in San Francisco was named.

Well, I never heard of Clyde, but there's a chance that he is a distant relation. Regarding Haight st., we Haights always take a bow when the thoroughfare is mentioned.

Before the California gold rush days, I understand all the Haights hung close to the East Coast. However, when news began to trickle in from California about guys with picks and shovels making a fast buck, the Haights got together and decided it was easier to dig for gold than potatoes.

Anyway, they hocked their possessions, fitted out a wagon train and were California bound. There must have been fat Haights even then because, as I heard it, the progress of the Haight covered wagons was slow and it was autumn when they reached Iowa.

At that point they met some trappers who informed them that Indian tribes to the West were on the warpath.

Now there's one thing Haights always had plenty of and that's hair. It didn't take long for many of them to figure how attractive their shaggy scalps would be to the redskins.

THERE WAS A MEETING and a vote was taken on what to do. Half the Haights decided to risk everything to get to the goldfields and the other half was for staying in Iowa for the winter and then going back East.

My branch of the family tree backtracked. At least some of the other group reached the West Coast. If they were in time to win any gold—well, they never sent any East, if you know what I mean.

I'm told that among the brave Haights that completed the journey there were some who had real courage and others who carried it around in a jug. I'm not sure, but San Francisco's Haight st. could have been named for one of the family found lying in the curb.

I used to hear so much about the drinking Haights that I began to believe that it was a Haight with the morning-after shakes who started the San Francisco earthquake.

AT ANY RATE, there have been Haights popping up in the news on the West Coast for years and there was a tendency among our Haights to claim relationship to almost any Haight. There's a movie director in Hollywood by the name whom we have adopted along with a man who ran for Congress, the president of a bank and others.

However, this catch-as-catch-can relative-claiming by the Haights came to an abrupt ending some years ago.

I came home one night and walked in on a family gathering.

"Do we have any relatives in New England," I asked.

There were several replies of "Oh, yes," etc.

"That's too bad," I replied, showing them the first page of the paper. "It says here that a fellow they are calling 'Mad Dog' Haight murdered a little girl up in Connecticut."

Strange, but not a one of our Haights ever heard of this Haight.

Bullis Tops Strayers in '48 Opener

Names Doctor As Abortionist

The Washington Post
MRS. ESTHER P. HOBBS
Government's star witness

Doctor Named In Abortion

creased my love . . . for the first time in my life I have found true happiness . . ."

The letter was signed "your husband, Jim."

Laughlin, who is reported to have been divorced, was asked by reporters about his marital status at the time he was friendly with Mrs. Hobbs. "That will all come out in testimony," he answered.

Another letter dated July 15, 1946, and received by Mrs. Hobbs when she was in Pittsboro, N. C., read:

"Hello, sweet Esther. Please hurry back, darling. I love you with all my heart. Jim."

Earlier, Mrs. Hobbs told the court that when she found she was pregnant she suggested to Laughlin that she either have an abortion or they get married.

Laughlin, she said, opposed the first suggestion, and, the witness indicated, was somewhat cool toward the second.

"I told him I would like to be relieved of my pregnancy," the witness said. "He wasn't planning to do anything. Because we were engaged I said to him 'we could get married.' He was silent a few minutes, then said 'Oh well, we could.'"

Mrs. Hobbs testified that she kept pressing Laughlin to do something but that he "never would say 'yes' or 'no.'"

Mrs. Hobbs continued: "I told him I felt like killing myself. He then said he would make arrangements for an abortion."

The witness then declared that Laughlin took her to the home of a nurse, Mrs. Irma Petrain at 2215 H st. nw., on March 19, where the matter was discussed.

She said she and Laughlin returned the following night to Mrs. Petrain's and that she was driven by a "Mr. Stottlemyer" to 428 H st., se., where she said an operation was performed by Dr. Peckham.

Mrs. Hobbs said that Peckham visited her two days later at the H st., address and she described a second operation there.

"Did Mr. Laughlin say anything about what had just happened?" asked Murray.

"He said: 'I'm glad it's all over with. It's such a shame . . . It was a boy'," answered the witness. She asserted that Peckham made another visit on March 23 at which time he prescribed medicines.

Mrs. Hobbs' character was attacked by H. Mason Welch, Peckham's attorney who inquired of her if she hadn't been obliged to move from rooming houses because of her conduct with men.

This the witness vigorously denied.

Under additional grilling, she became confused about the dates of the operations and the time of Peckham's alleged visits. During this examination she placed the first operation date as occurring on a Wednesday which would have been March 19 instead of March 20 as she had earlier testified.

Mrs. Hobbs, who was on the stand for 5 hours and 15 minutes, will face additional cross-examination today when court resumes at 10 a. m.

Man Who Broke Brother's Door Gets 360 Days

Frank Hensley, of 1440 N st. nw., has decided he is not his brother's keeper—the District can take care of that.

And the District will, for the next 360 days.

Hensley's brother, Joseph Paul, 37, of no fixed address, was tried before Municipal Judge George D Neilson Tuesday, charged with unlawful entry and destroying private property.

Brother Frank told his story. He testified he and his brother do not get along. He said that last Sunday Joseph came to his house and when refused admittance, battered down the door. Frank called police.

Judge Neilson took a look at Joseph's record before sentencing him to a 360-day jail term. The record showed 14 arrests on drunk charges in the last two years, as well as three jail terms since 1938 for larceny and housebreaking.

Property Tax Revision Asked In Assembly

Richmond, Jan. 14 (AP).—The Virginia General Assembly swiftly and smoothly organized for the 1948 session today and, as the first piece of completed business, urged Congress to end tax discriminations caused by community property laws in about 12 States.

Also, both houses set in motion machinery for registration of lobbyists and referred to appropriate committees resolutions to ratify a proposed constitutional amendment which would limit the office of the Presidency of the United States to two terms.

The dozen or so States which have community property laws permit husband and wife to split the income of the family and thus pay in a lower Federal income tax bracket. Both houses unanimously indorsed a memorial to Congress protesting the "discrimination" against taxpayers in States where such an income division is not permitted.

The proposal to ratify the Constitutional amendment limiting the tenure of the president in office was the first piece of legislation sponsored by State Senator Harry Flood Byrd, jr., of Winchester, whose father, U. S. Senator Byrd, looked on approvingly. In the House, Delegate John B. Boatwright, of Buckingham, introduced a similar resolution.

If the resolution is adopted, Virginia will become the nineteenth state to ratify the proposed amendment.

The organization of the assembly found well-known faces in the usual places. Speaker of the house G. Alvin Massenburg, of Hampton, dressed in morning formal and carrying a top hat, took over for another term. And so did Col. E. Griffith Dodson, sr., as clerk.

In the Senate, Lieut. Gov. L. Preston Collins, of Marion, automatically was presiding officer. There, Senator Robert O. Norris, of Lancaster, again became president pro-tem. E. R. Combs was re-elected Senate clerk.

The House received a bill for the new charter of the City of Richmond, providing a council-manager form of government.

The House also received bills:

Authorizing the Secretary of the Commonwealth to transfer to the State library records of absentee ballot requests from members of the armed forces during the war period.

Empowering counties to prohibit the sale of fireworks in certain cases.

Authorizing the Secretary of the Commonwealth to transfer election records to the State Board of Elections.

The Senate received two potentially controversial bills from Senator Dalton: "1. To submit to the qualified electors the question whether there shall be a convention to amend the Constitution on the poll tax question; and 2. To amend the code prescribing who shall serve as jurors.

Tuck Proposes Tax Increase

bringing the average teacher's pay in the State, with matching local funds, to about 2250 a year as against an average of 1615 in effect at the beginning of Tuck's administration two years ago.

Concerning increasing unemployment compensation benefits, Tuck recommended that a maximum of $20 weekly be based on earnings of $37 or more, and suggested that the present payroll tax rate of 1 per cent to 2.7 per cent start at three tenths of 1 per cent. Present rate of benefit, he said, was based "on conditions existing in 1936."

The State Unemployment Compensation Fund at last accounting, the Governor said, appeared to be sufficient to withstand a severe employment decline.

Regarding public health matters, the Governor noted positive strides had been made but said many rural sections were still without adequate facilities and many tuberculosis cases cannot be admitted to the sanatoria for lack of proper plants and sufficient personnel.

Public Health Service

He proposed an increase of 1,206,128 in the general fund appropriation for recurring expenses "incident to the expansion of public health services to all of Virginia and for the operation of the sanatoria."

An analagous situation exists with respect to the mental institutions, Tuck went on, with respect to plant and personnel problems, in spite of increases in salary and wage scales.

"To augment these efforts and provide a level of care which will at least meet basic requirements," he said, "I propose a further increase of $3,848,747 for 1948-50 in the appropriations from the geenral fund for recurring expenses to the mental hospital system. Including funds for capital improvements and other purposes, the total increase recommended for the new biennium for these activities is more than $8,000,000."

Reorganization Message Later

The Governor told the House and Senate that he would have a message later for their consideration on the reorganization of the State government based on recommendations made to him by a study commission headed by former U. S. Senator Burch.

Also, he said he might have other recommendations as the session progresses and as the occasion arises.

In closing, Tuck adjured the legislators to shun the "alluring flutes" of the "political pied pipers." These flutes could best be deprived of their enchantment he added, "by steadfast adherence to the fundamental principles of democracy first established upon the soil of Virginia and which have brought us so successfully through the years."

Ought Walter Reuther Eat Words on Steel Expansion?

By J. A. Livingston

IF BENJAMIN FAIRLESS of United States Steel or Eugene Grace of Bethlehem were on letter-writing terms with Walter Reuther, president of the United Auto Workers, they might sit themselves down on their collective haunches and dictate as follows:

"Dear Mr. Reuther:

"Back in May, June, July, and August, when automobile companies had to shut down now and then because of a shortage of steel, you demanded an investigation of our industry. You complained that we were deliberately holding down output and conspiring not to build new plants. Perhaps now, Mr. Reuther, is the time for you to go on a diet of your words.

Livingston

"Have you read the recent statements of the American Iron and Steel Institute? They show we produced 85 million tons of ingots last year. That's not the biggest total ever, since in the war year of 1944, we produced 90 million tons. But the '47 total was 18 million tons, or a fourth, bigger than 1946. Sure, we know 1946 wasn't quite the year it should have been. We lost about nine million tons because of a 25-day steel strike, two coal strikes—one lasting 59 days and the other 16 days—and a two-day railroad strike. But you can't get away from the fact that production was 37% ahead of '29 and 60% ahead of '39.

"Not only that, Walter—you don't mind if we call you Walter, do you?—we did add to plant, despite your assertions. Total steel capacity today is 94,200,000 tons of ingots, or 2,900,000 more than at the end of 1946. As a result, we are within 1,300,000 tons of the wartime high in '45. I'm sure you understand, Walter, why plant capacity is down. After the war we abandoned obsolete or inefficient plant. Or we decommissioned plant too costly for peacetime operation—like unneeded electric furnaces used for making high-alloy steel, which is no longer in great demand.

"In view of these facts, Walter, don't you think an apol—well maybe apology is too strong a word—let's say a retraction is in order?

"Triumphantly yours,

"BEN AND GENE."

REUTHER, never a man at a loss for words, might well reply:

"Gentlemen:

"Don't boast. Sure you increased steel capacity. But you didn't boost it enough. Sure, you raised the volume of output. Why shouldn't you? You had the plant to begin with, and some of it you got at nice, favorable prices from the Government—the Geneva plant that U. S. Steel bought, for instance. But when the country was in dire need of steel, you had the audacity to scrap plant.

"The way I see it—and as I told Congress—you lack faith in the future of America. You fear a depression. The country needs a capacity to make 100 million tons of steel and you'll still be short of the mark—even if after you complete installation of another two million tons of capacity this year and next. Irretractably yours,

"WALTER."

Such could be the beginning of a lively correspondence. Of one result you can be sure, neither side would be convinced. Reuther's direct and immediate concern is his auto workers and his success as a union leader. If workers are laid off for want of steel, he gets the beefs. It's his fault. And if wages are not sufficient to meet the rise in living costs, again he gets the beefs.

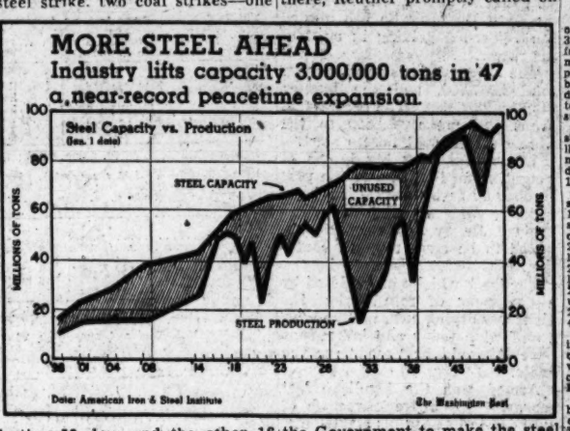
So last spring when auto companies needed steel and it wasn't there, Reuther promptly called on the Government to make the steel companies deliver it. Reuther is a firm believer in Government controls over industry.

AS FOR the steelmasters, they have their problems and responsibilities. Building new plants takes steel. It's not like planting corn in the spring and harvesting it in late summer and fall. You don't get the steel that you plow into a plant back for about a year and a half. So the steel companies went easy.

Further, Fairless, Grace, and the other steelmasters are like you and me. They're not immune to doubts and fears. Yes, they realize that they operated their plants at 93% of capacity last year. Yet never in any previous peactime year had they reached a 90% rate. And they remember the year 1932 when 80% of their plant was idle. So they're not rushing out to build plant to meet what may prove to be temporary demand. They don't want to be plant-poor again. They want time to make careful analyses of long-term market potentials.

But there's no doubt—as the chart shows—that steel capacity is at a peacetime high and that 1948 ought to produce another peacetime record in production.

On the facts, therefore, Fairless and Grace would be warranted in using "Triumphantly yours"—as a complimentary close to the correspondence.



SEC Tightens Utility Issues Bidding Rule

Utility companies proposing to sell securities to the public must first submit them to underwriting firms for competitive bidding, the Securities and Exchange Commission ruled yesterday.

Any requests for exemption from the competitive bidding requirements of rule U-50 of the general rules of the Public Utility Holding Company Act will be flatly turned down from now on, the commission said.

It said its ruling applied to cases where competitive bidding apparently is required and the applicant has, before getting SEC permission, started negotiations on the terms of sale with prospective buyers of its securities.

Heretofore, rule U-50 required competitive bidding in connection with the public sale of securities by any holding company registered with the SEC, unless the commission found that such competitive bidding was not in the public interest.

The commission took its new stand in an opinion approving an exemption from competitive bidding for the proposed issue and sale of $5,225,000 in 3¼ per cent, 20-year collateral trust bonds, by New England Gas and Electric Association.

New York Cotton

New York, Jan. 14 (AP).—Cotton futures were lower in slow dealings today under light but persistent liquidating pressure coming principally through New Orleans. Final prices were 3 cents to $1.05 a bale lower and at one time the market showed losses extending to more than $1.50 a bale.

Hedge selling was more active than in recent sessions, partly reflecting increased spot sales of cotton at primary markets. Some merchants also hedged cotton which they had been carrying on an unprotected basis.

80% of Gas Stock Issue Subscribed

By S. Oliver Goodman

Eighty per cent, or 68,400 shares of the Washington Gas Light Co. common stock offering was subscribed, a company spokesman reported yesterday.

The unsubscribed portion probably will be sold to the public through local innvestment dealers, as indicated, at a price per share that "will be related to the current market value." The gas firm's stock yesterday sold at $21 a share. The offering price on the basis of "rights" given to old shareholders had been $20 a share.

In order to dispose of the remaining 16,600 shares, the company first must file an amendment to its original registration with the Public Utilities Commission. Routine approval by the regulatory agency is anticipated. The future sale of gas stock will be ex-dividend the next 37½-cent payment due on February 1. Subscribers to the 68,400 shares will receive the dividend.

SYMPOSIUM: Rubber problems were explored by a panel of military, Government and industry experts at a meeting here Tuesday night sponsored by the Chemical Engineers Club of Washington. Moderator was Admiral C. E. Braine, chairman of the Munitions Board rubber committee. Because of the public interest in rubber as a vital factor in both wartime strength and peacetime health, the public was admitted to the discussions at the Chamber of Commerce auditorium.

been transferred, thereby reducing the efficiency of the Fire Department."

Both attorneys agreed to stipulations that 556 men were transferred in the department between March 1, 1946 and September 1, 1947.

Percentage of transfers in the department's 49 companies, ranged from 15 to 131 per cent in that period. Normal complement of the 49 companies was 860 men. Of the 556 transfers, 389 are in dispute.

Harding, a fireman 28 years, a former drillmaster, and author of part of the local fire manual, said that in the Seventh Battalion, which he commanded, there was a normal complement of 117 men, and a total of 127 personnel changes.

Murphy has defended the rotation system on the grounds it gives each fireman a knowledge of all types of firefighting and all sections of the city.

In four months, Harding said, a single company, Engine Co. 18, in the downtown section of the city, lost three "first wagon drivers." The drivers, he said, are among the key men in the company in knowledge of quickest routes to fires, locations of fire hydrants, etc.

The "promiscuous transfers," said the battalion chief, impaired vital teamwork, "made my battalion less efficient," and "tended to definitely lower morale." He said it made companies slow in "getting into service," in reaching the fire scene, and brought "indecision."

Harding had concluded his expected testimony when Board Chairman Canfield leaned across his desk to ask:

"Do you think that lessened their efficiency in fighting a fire?"

"No," answered Harding in a firm tone, "You don't lessen efficiency by actions such as this . . . in fighting fire men are going in and do their best regardless . . . that is born in them, bred in them. . . .

There was no discussion as to whether Harding meant men would be slow in reaching a fire but would do a thorough job once they reached the blaze.

As Harding's statement echoed across the hearing room, Canfield asked:

"But would incidents of inefficiency be reported?"

Answered Harding, "A captain wouldn't last long if he reported minor infractions . . . Don't forget, he would be reporting himself."

HAROLD F. HARDING
Gives surprising testimony

Harding said he once committed an infraction himself, but added, "I'm not going to say when—now."

The trial was recessed to 10 a. m. today when defense counsel is scheduled to cross-examine Harding.

Bill Would Repeal Anti-Margarine Laws

Representative Poage (D., Tex.), saying he believes Federal anti-margarine laws are "restrictive" and "most unsavory in character," yesterday introduced legislation for their repeal.

Poage told the House Congress "will bring credit upon itself and do the entire country a service if it tears out these anti-margarine laws by the roots and flings them where they belong—upon the scrap heap of oblivion."

What To Do For That Sluggish, Down-and-Out Feeling

Remember the time when you could eat like a horse, bubbled-over with energy, felt happy as a lark? Was it not because you liked to eat—didn't know what indigestion was, felt strong as an ox? As age advances the "old stomach and the ever-changing blood" need help. Now you may again release vibrant energy to every muscle, fibre, cell.

Every day—every hour—millions of tiny red-blood-cells must pour forth from the marrow of your bones to replace those that are worn-out. A low blood count may affect you in several ways: no appetite, underweight, no energy, a run-down condition, lack of resistance to infection and disease.

To get real relief you must keep up your blood strength. Medical authorities, by analysis of the blood, have by positive proof shown that SSS Tonic is amazingly effective in building up low blood strength in non-organic nutritional anemia. This is due to the SSS Tonic formula which contains special and potent activating ingredients.

Also, SSS Tonic helps you enjoy the food you eat by increasing the gastric digestive juice when it is non-organically too little or scanty—thus the stomach will have little cause to get balky with gas, bloat and give off that sour food taste.

Don't wait! Energize your body with rich, red-blood. Start on SSS Tonic now. As vigorous blood surges throughout your whole body, greater freshness and strength should make you eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, play better, have a healthy color glow in your skin—firm flesh fill out hollow places. Millions of bottles sold. Get a bottle from your drug store. SSS Tonic helps Build Sturdy Health.

What Am I Saying! — By Frank Morgan

It is better to keep your mouth shut and be thought a fool than to open it and remove all doubt.

The Federal Diary

by Jerry Kluttz

Wright Is Reported Considering Quitting Post With CAA Soon

GOVERNMENT GOSSIP——

THAT Theodore P. Wright is thinking seriously of resigning as administrator of Civil Aeronautics Administration. Around CAA, it's reported that Wright would like to leave around March 1.

And if he does, the Government will lose another able and hard-hitting man. Wright earned many times his $10,000 Federal salary in industry before the war and he can undoubtedly do it again. It was emphasized that the report of the President's Air Policy Commission was no factor in his desire to resign——

THAT Richard Parkhurst is not expected to seek renomination to the Maritime Commission when his term expires in a few weeks——

THAT a Cabinet member—one of the President's favorites—is all set to make a public appeal for higher salaries for Federal officials and employes to halt the wave of resignations of competent and experienced people. The appeal will be made despite the President's recent statement that he opposes cost-of-living pay raises at this time——

THAT the unclaimed pennies in the accounts of Federal workers who purchase war bonds through the payroll deduction system amounted to more than $11,000 last year. The money was turned over to the Treasury——

THAT Interior Secretary Julius Krug owns only 5 per cent of the Los Angeles football Rams, and that his interest cost him about $7500. Also, he bought into the Rams before a heavy interest in the team was purchased by Ed Pauley, oil operator, millionaire, successful commodity market operator, and Army official. Krug is a former Wisconsin University football star and he has retained his interest in the sport, and,

THAT Senator Langer will investigate the Internal Revenue Bureau after he completes hearings on his $1000 across-the-board pay raise bill for Federal workers. Hearings will begin today.

NFFE: The National Federation of Federal Employes, the big independent union of Federal workers, is behind the proposed revision of the Classification Act, the law that fixes pay rates of annual Federal workers. It says:

"A minimum rate must be set up that is realistic and recognizes comparable pay in private industry and the tremendous increase in the cost of living, and upon such an adequate base the rates throughout the compensation schedules must be revised to establish the proper relationship between jobs.

"The overlapping of grades must be eliminated. There must be fewer grades with longer salary ranges within grades, so that some recognition, now denied, may be granted to employes who have reached the top of the present short grades but whose work demands additional financial remuneration in the interest of fair administration."

Administration officials are continuing their work on a sweeping revision of the act.

TRAVEL: Representative Carter Manasco (D., Ala.) yesterday introduced the Senate-approved Aiken bill in the House to raise the travel allowance of Federal employes from $6 to $8 a day. The bill was referred to the House Committee on Executive Expenditures, of which Manasco is a member.

Manasco said many Federal employes who are ordered to travel must pay part of their own expenses. He also pointed out that his bill gave traveling employes the right to draw an advance on their allowance. He said that some employes had to wait up to three months for approval of their allowances.

G-GIRLS — The Government girls at Arlington Farms have sent a petition to members of Congress urging them to keep the dormitory open permanently. There has been talk that the Farms may be closed in about a year. Four Alabama members of Congress visited the Farms this week as the guests of Ida Robb, an Army employe.

Chicago Symphony To Let Rodzinski Go

Chicago, Jan. 14 (U.P.).—The Chicago Symphony Orchestra announced tonight that it had failed to reach a "satisfactory understanding" with Dr. Artur Rodzinski and that his engagement as conductor would terminate at the end of the current season.

Gas Flow Disrupted By Break In Pipeline

Normal Service Will Be Resumed Today as Repairs Are Rushed in Va.

The flow of natural gas into the District, interrupted yesterday by a break in a main pipeline near Warrenton, Va., is expected to be resumed early today.

Officials of Washington Gas Light Co., which began emergency production of artificial gas to assure an adequate gas supply here, said last night repair of the pipeline was under way and completion was "just a matter of hours."

Parts needed to repair the pipe were flown to Warrenton from Huntington, W. Va.

The break occurred at Rixeyville about 15 miles west of Warrenton about 4:15 a. m. It interrupted service to the District and numerous other communities along the route from West Virginia.

Although an appeal for conservation measures pending completion of the repairs was issued, all of the communities were reported to have sufficient reserve supplies to carry them through last night.

Spokesmen for the Atlantic Seaboard Corp., which operates the line, said the break apparently was caused by a piece of metal which worked loose inside the pipe. The gas flow caused the broken piece to strike the side of the pipe repeatedly until the pipe eventually broke.

Soon after the break was reported, the Washington Gas Light Co., here began manufacture of artificial gas at its East Plant at 12th and N sts., se. The plant has a capacity of about 40,000,000 cubic feet a day, Superintendent H. B. Noyes said, and the company had a reserve supply of about 35,000,000 cubic on hand.

Persons living near the pipeline at Rixeyville said the roar of the escaping gas could be heard for more than a mile.

Bomb Squads Attack Arab Communities

Jerusalem, Jan. 14 (AP).—Jewish bomb squads attacked two Arab communities on the outskirts of Jerusalem again tonight in a desprate effort to blast open a way to Hebrew University and Hadassah Hospital, isolated on Mount Scopus.

The area of Sheikh Jarrah and Nashashibi, police said, saw the heaviest of three assaults launched in 24 hours.

The two Arab communities north of Damascus Gate lie athwart the only road the Jews can take to Mount Scopus.

Three columns of uniformed Arabs converged during the day on a cluster of three Jewish communities on the road between Bethlehem and Hebron, and a government announcement said the village of Kfar Etzion had been placed under siege.

Government security forces "are in constant touch and ready to act as the developing situation demands," the statement added.

Hagana, Jewish militia, said tonight that 100 Arabs were killed and 100 wounded in this fighting, but there was no confirmation. Hagana said only five Jews were wounded.

Competent sources reported 18 deaths in the day's violence from various parts of the Holy Land. The killings brought to 728 the unofficial count since the November 29 decision of the United Nation to partition Palestine.

Dispatches from Damascus said hundreds of Arabs were slipping across the unguarded northern frontiers of Palestine in order to join in the fight against Jews.

In the Arab coastal city of Jaffa the streets were thronged with Syrians, Iraqi and Trans-Jordanians awaiting orders to move against the adjoining modern Jewish city of Tel Aviv.

Arab informants said that if full-scale war comes it cannot be won unless Tel Aviv falls.

Authoritative sources said the Palestine government had asked Moslem, Christian and Jewish religious leaders to declare Jerusalem's ancient walled area an "open city." Some 1500 Jews are still besieged in the Old City.

Reward for Assailant

Bethesda businessmen have started a movement which they hope will lead to a reward of at least $500 being offered for the arrest and conviction of the assailant who shot Houston H. Swink, 39-year-old Bethesda grocer, Monday night.

Adlai S. Magee, 8100 Wisconsin ave., said a meeting will be held on the subject tomorrow in the offices of Thomas E. Hampton, 8015 Wisconsin ave., at 8:30 p. m.

Swink, of the S and S Market, 8011 Wisconsin ave., was shot suddenly in the leg with a shotgun at the entrance to his home. His assailant fled with $1600 in store receipts.

Brady Goes to Holland

Capt. Roland H. Brady, USAF, of Baltimore has been assigned as assistant air attache to the Netherlands, Andrews Field authorities announced yesterday. Captain Brady has been stationed at Andrews Field since November, 1945.

Bette Rides Again . . .

The Washington Post

THIRTY DAYS HAVE PAST—Beauteous Bette Light, 22-year-old George Washington University coed, was behind the wheel of her sleek new convertible once again yesterday. Bette's father, Joseph Light, a contractor, of 1436 Kennedy st. nw., took the car keys away from his daughter a month ago after she was charged with driving his Packard 40 miles an hour on 16th st. nw. At that time a Municipal Court prosecutor decided the parental judgment to stop her from driving for 30 days was a greater penalty than a $10 fine

Montgomery 'Not Opposed' To Fare Rise

But Officials Ask Reduced Rates For School Children

Associated Press Staff Writer

Baltimore, Jan. 13.—Montgomery County officials tolad the Public service commission today they did not oppose a general Maryland rate increase proposed by the Capital Transit Co. but would like to see special reduced fares for school children.

Their stand differed sharply from from that taken by residents of neighboring Prince Georges County, who have employed Attorney Gregory Hankin to wage a strenuous fight against the increase.

Brooke Johns, chairman of the Montgomery County Board of Commissioners, and its superintendent, Irving McNair, told the PSC, which is conducting a hearing on the Washington utility's proposed boost, that their "vital" and "primary interest was that of fares for school children."

When they concluded with McNair stating that "we do noe object nor could any other citizen object to the transit company's desire to obtain a fair amount of return for its services," Hankin demanded to know "the purpose of this exhibition."

He asked whether the two witnesses were speaking "for the citizens of Montgomery County or as private individuals." Told that as officials they were representatives of the county, Hankin said: "So long as they don't speak for any citizen of Prince Georges County, I don't care if they give the Transit Co. a million dollars.

John said he would like to see the present 100-strip fare booklet selling for $3 retained for school children while other rates went up, in accordance with CTC's request, to 5 cents per 1½-mile zone.

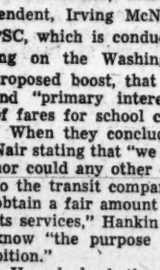
Later, Albert Conradis, Montgomery County public utilities agent, asked the company's staff engineer, Dean J. Locke, if he thought the concern would loose much revenue if the special school rate were established.

Locke said such a rate would impose serious obstacles as to administration, with attendant costs, and open the way to abuses. He amplified that by saying it was difficult to identify school children as such.

The hearing was recessed "indefinitely" by Commission Chairman Charles Boswell, because the agency's calendar is crowded. He gave no date, but resumption is not expected inside three weeks.

Condition of 4 Crash Survivors Reported 'Good'

The condition of the four men who survived the crash of an Eastern Air Lines DC-3 transport south of National Airport early Tuesday was described as "good" here yesterday.



Moebus

Five persons, including the pilot and co-pilot, died when the 21-passenger, twin-engine craft plunged suddenly into an oak grove near Oxon Hill, Md., on its approach run to the airport.

The survivors are: Navy Capt. Lucian A. Moebus, 47, wartime commander of the aircraft carrier Saratoga, who was en route to Washington for duty at the Navy Department; Eugene Stone, 40 Pensacola, Fla.; Morris Maples 3d, 24, of Princeton, N. J., and Flight Attendant Peter L. Philios, 22, of Astoria, N. Y.

3 Caught in Utah

Last Escapee Of 4 Retaken In Hyattsville

By Phillip J. Austensen
Post Reporter

The last of four men who made a successful break from the Prince Georges County jail at Upper Marlboro on December 10 was recaptured early yesterday in Hyattsville.

James Francis Hampson, 25, formerly of East Riverdale, Md., who escaped a police trap in Salt Lake City, Utah, last week when his three companions in the jail break were captured, literally walked into the arms of Hyattsville Policeman Elmer Thompson and Charles Williams as they were making a routine check in the rear of the Queens Chapel Shopping Center around 6:30 a.m.

Thompson said Hampson, apparently believing he was about to be trapped in a cleaning establishment, darted out the rear door as the officers approached. He surrendered meekly when Thompson drew his gun and ordered him to halt.

Found Suits On Counter

Investigation by the policemen disclosed that Hampson had taken his pick of suits in the cleaning plant, and had them laid out on a counter before the officers arrived.

The policemen said they recognized the prisoner as one of the four Marlboro escapees as they were taking him to the county jail at Hyattsville. Normally a blond, he apparently had dyed his hair black in an effort to escape detection, they said.

Hampson was charged with breaking and entering and unauthorized use of an automobile at Hyattsville, and then transferred to the Upper Marlboro jail, where he was being held without bond last night. Police said he admitted having stolen a new automobile, which was parked near the cleaning establishment, in Uniontown, Pa., last week after leaving Salt Lake City.

Tells of Salt Lake City Escape

According to police, Hampson said he was in a Salt Lake City drugstore last week when his three companions were arrested with two girls in a car parked nearby. He said he saw the police cordon close in on the car, and nonchalantly strolled out as they were making the arrest.

Still being held by Salt Lake City police are William Midgett, 25, a fugtive from a Virginia chain gang before his arrest near Marlboro several months ago; Joseph Boswell, 31, Oxon Hill, Md., and Robert Morris, 23, of Laurel. According to Prince Georges authorities, they probably will face charges in Salt Lake City before being returned to Maryland.

Hampson, who was released by a Prince Georges County grand jury on a charge of abducting a 17-year-old girl in October, was serving a 60-day jail sentence for nonsupport at the time of the escape. Midgett was awaiting grand jury action on a robbery charge; Boswell was serving a 60-day sentence for drunkenness and Morris was awaiting grand jury action on a charge of larceny.

4 Brothers Lose Suit

The Court of Appeals in Annapolis, Md., yesterday ruled that the four brothers of a Mount Rainier woman are not entitled to her profits from property investments.

By the action, Mrs. Edward Smith won her contention that a trust for the entire family existed only in an insurance fund of $5846 which Samuel Bass left his wife in 1929.

The four brothers, Solomon, Sidney, Jacob and Benjamin H. Bass, held that the trust extended to all property investments made by Mrs. Smith, partly with proceeds from their father's insurance.

X-Rays Rise To 6200 on Third Day

Free Examinations For All Citizens For Tuberculosis Up Despite Cold

Cold weather yesterday did not slow up the mounting momentum of the drive to X-ray Washington's adult population.

The campaign to uncover tuberculosis at its source, the human chest, brought approximately 6200 persons to free X-ray stations during the day, a substantial increase over Tuesday's total of 4700 and the nearly 4500 of opening day, Monday.

By June 15, sponsors of the campaign hope to have examined the chests of 600,000 residents and workers 15 years of age and older. The drive is sponsored jointly by United States Public Health Service, the District Health Department and the District of Columbia Tuberculosis Association.

Special competition developed yesterday:

On Monday and Tuesday, when X-ray machines were set up in Jelleff's department store and at Hotel Statler, both concerns reported complete coverage of employes, barring absentees. Since then, it was learned, the store and hotel have been rushing those who missed X-rays to the Central Unit.

A special placard, comparable to the wartime "E" flags for industry, awaits those concerns which register 100 per cent participation. The race is on for the first of these placards.

Yesterday, portable installations began X-raying employes of the Mayflower Hotel and Garfinckel's department store, and were kept continuously in operation throughout the day. The Mayflower has advised its permanent resident guests that free chest X-rays will be available to them on Friday between 11 a. m. and noon.

Chest X-Ray Hours And Stations Listed

Any person over 15 years of age may drop in for free, confidential chest X-ray between the designated hours at the following locations:

Central Survey Unit, 1350 Pennsylvania ave. nw., daily, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Mobile Unit No. 1, 61st and Dix sts. ne., Tuesday through Saturday, 9:30 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Mobile Unit No. 2, S. Capitol st. and Nichols ave. sw., Tuesday through Saturday, 9:30 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Mobile Unit No. 3, Pennsylvania and Minnesota aves. se., Tuesday through Saturday, 9:30 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Mobile Unit No. 4, Connecticut ave. and K st. nw., daily except Sunday, 9:30 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Confidential findings of your X-ray will be mailed to your home, regardless of where you live. All service is free, and without embarrassment.

Reds Seen Backing GI Student Drive

By the United Press

Representative Richard M. Vail, (R., Ill.) said yesterday that "Operation Subsistence," a student veteran movement seeking higher GI subsistence payments, is "under the direction of Communist influences."

He made the statement after his House Subcommittee on UnAmerican activities questioned four students from DePaul University, Chicago, who came to Washington with other veterans to lobby for a $35 monthly allowance increase for student veterans.

They claimed that present monthly allowances are inadequate. President Truman said in his recent budget message that higher veteran allowances would be inflationary.

Vail said that his subcommittee, which was set up to look into "Operation Subsistence," called in the four students after they claimed to have been housed by persons with left-wing ideas.

He identified the four as William Fitzsimmons, Jack Berry, William Hurley and Richard Collins.

"The testimony we heard," he said, "made it very evident that the movement 'Operation Subsistence' was under the direction of Communist influences."

He said that "the individuals who housed these boys and attempted to direct their thinking along extremely liberal lines are known to have a record of Communist front organization affiliation."

He said the students' hosts "brought the boys in and painted a rosier picture of Soviet life in Russia. They stated definitely that the capitalistic system had had its chance and failed. They also indicated their favor for socialized medicine."

Gerstein Denies Charge

Marvin Gerstein, George Washington University student who served as a scout with Patton's Third Army in Germany, angrily denied that "Operation Subsistence" was in any way influenced by Communism. He said he had acted as a "sort of secretary" to the movement, sending out letters and a bi-weekly newsletter to local chapters on some 250 college campuses.

"I not only am not a Communist," Gerstein said, "but I never even had my name on anything associated with Communism."

Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.) charged meanwhile that a news story about "Operation Subsistence" in the Washington Times-Herald was an attempt to "smear" him by linking his name with Communist propagandists.

Vail said in fact that girl students from George Washington University had attended a party where the out-of-town students were guests was no reflection on G.W. or on any other local educational institution.

Thomas Circle

Thomas Circle Citizens Association, meeting last night at 1536 16th st. nw., expressed disapproval of President Truman's plans for a balcony outside the presidential family's quarters at the White House.

The association indorsed, however, proposals for voluntary admission of patients to St. Elizabeths Hospital and for a District of Columbia sales tax.

2 Men Die in Hotel Fire Attributed to Cigarette

FATAL WINTER BLAZE—Aerial ladders reach up to the windows of the burning Potomac Hotel, 18th and H sts. nw., swept by a four-alarm fire early yesterday. One man was burned to death in a fifth floor room and other occupants of the hotel were routed into below-freezing weather

60 Other Guests Flee 5 A. M. Blaze At the Potomac, 18th and H Sts. N.W.

Two men residents were fatally burned in a four-alarm fire at the Potomac Hotel, 800 18th st. nw., and 60 hastily clad guests were routed shortly after 5 a. m. yesterday.

Charred beyond recognition, the body of Wallace O. Hickcox, about 60, was found in his room.

Harold W. Sill, 49, died 10 hours later of third-degree burns of the face, hands and feet in Emergency Hospital. His room was next to Hickcox's.

No one else was injured.

Acting Fire Marshal Roy Warfield said the blaze, which swept the top floor of the six-story structure, apparently started from careless smoking in Hickcox' room.

Scantily Clad Guests Flee

Dozens of guests at the hotel, which had a fire fatality three years ago, abandoned their rooms in skimpy attire to face subfreezing temperatures outdoors. Many took refuge in nearby hotels, including the Roger Smith and Everett.

Flames spread from the top floor into the hall and to the roof and flooded the building with dense smoke. The staircase was left clear, however, enabling most guests to escape. Many returned later for their belongings.

Most guest were roused by the night clerk, Francis G. Bahl, 4738 N. 15th st., Arlington. Apparently in response to a kick on the door by Bahl, 10-year-old Michael Norman awakened his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Norman, and his two younger brothers, Jimmy, 8, and Johnny, 5.

Found After an Hour

Later, Michael, too impatient to wait for his parents, dashed downstairs and into the street to watch firemen fight the blaze. When the rest of the family reached the street he was gone, and his parents searched frantically for him.

He was discovered more than an hour later at the District Regional Office of the Veterans Administration.

"I was cold and I couldn't find any other place to get warm," he said.

According to Caesar Aiello, attorney, Hickcox, a native of Washington, was an accountant formerly employed by the Government. Sill, according to his brother, Louis Sill, 6635 13th st. nw., was born in Washington and was graduated from Central High School and Georgetown University Law School. His wife and two children reside in Albany, N. Y.

Forty-six pieces of fire apparatus responded to the alarms.

2 Schenley Suits On Grain Order Set for Tuesday

Two suits, in which a distiller seeks to enjoin Secretary of Agriculture Anderson from carrying out his grain allocation program, will be heard in District Court next Tuesday. They were filed January 8 by the Schenley Distilling Corp.

The first challenges the constitutionality of what is called the "Taft Anti-Inflation Act," signed by President Truman December 30, and which expires January 31. The second, which came up in District Court yesterday, asks for a preliminary injunction until the constitutionality of the act is determined. Justice Matthew F. McGuire granted a defense motion to consolidate both hearings.

Schenley claims that the provisions of the law rationing grain for distillers is unconstitutional because other users are not similarly restricted. The company also claims that the allocation formula is unfair because it is based on company production rather than sales, and that Anderson had no right to make the allocation retroactive to October 1.

Justice McGuire yesterday permitted the Park & Tilford Distillers, who said they would file a suit similar to that filed by Schleny, to intervene.

Citizens' Open House

An "open house" for residents of the area and officials of nearby civic groups will be sponsored by the East Bethesda Citizens Association Monday at 8 p.m. in the Lynnbrook School.

Naming of Mason Branded 'Betrayal'

Terming President Truman's reappointment of District Commissioner Guy Mason "a betrayal of the Civil Rights Report," the Rev. Robert M. Williams last night issued public thanks to supporters of Charles H. Houston, attorney candidate for the post.

Mason, said the chairman of the Houston for Commissioner committee, "represents the very conditions which were the target of the Civil Rights Report. . . . The Negro people have absolutely no representation on the Board of Commisisoners either by a member of their race or by a man who has shown any interest in the advancement of their people."

Mother of 5 Held In Theft at Capitol

A 36-year-old mother of five children was arrested yesterday in the theft of $150 from a cash box of the House Restaurant on Capitol Hill.

She is Mrs. Margaret Gray of 911 Capitol st., a cashier in the restaurant who, officials said, admitted taking the money and reporting the loss as a "fake" robbery.

She was released on her personal bond of $200 for action of the grand jury.

According to Capitol Police Lieut. Michael Dowd, the cash loss totaled $383, but she was charged with stealing Federal Government property in the amount of $150.

Officials described it as a "pitiful case" in which the woman, beset with financial difficulties, had tried to borrow money, even played the numbers game in the hope of getting funds.

She had rented a house, intending to convert the upper floors into rooming quarters, but was denied a permit by the District because the place had no fire escape, officials added.

Lieutenant Dowd said Mrs. Gray signed a confession, admitting the theft of money from her own cash box and from the cash box of another cashier.

More Pupils Return

Attendance of Browne Junior High School students at the Blow and Webb annexes was nearly half of the normal enrollment yesterday, ahe highest since parents took the children out of classes December 3.

School officials credited the increase to calls of field workers in the attendance department at the homes of students still on strike. About 150 families have yet to be visited.

Of 552 students assigned to Blow and Webb in the morning, 236 were in attendance yesterday as compared with 186 on Tuesday. At the afternoon shift, 299 of 579 students were in classes. On Tuesday, 117 attended the annexes in the afternoon.

X-Rays for Arlingtonians

An Arlington X-ray survey similar to that in the District will be available for an estimated 50,000 Arlington residents over 15 years of age beginning February 17.

Sponsored jointly by the Arlington Health Department, the Arlington Tuberculosis Association and the Virginia State Department of Health, the chest X-ray survey will be free of charge. A schedule of survey centers and times will be announced.

Cannery Must Pay Rent

A Bethesda, Md., cannery must pay $1287 in back rent to owners of the building it occupies, the Maryland Court of Appeals held yesterday.

Louis M. Jackson and his wife appealed the case after the Montgomery County Court refused to order Douglas and H. William Birfeld, jr., to pay their rent for October and November, 1946. . . . . The Birfelds contended excavations begun by Jackson behind the one-story canning factory amount to "partial eviction."

Health Office Moved

The District Health Department's Indiana Nursing Office has moved from 462 Indiana ave. nw. to temporary quarters at 16 D st. nw. The office will remain at the temporary address pending renovations at Gale School, delayed by lack of funds in the current budget, Health Officer George C. Ruhland said.

Takes Health Post

Dr. Thomas F. Engler, new health officer for Prince Georges County, will formally assume his duties today.

Dr. Engler, former health officer for Charlottesville and Albemarle County, Va., was appointed December 23 to succeed Dr. John M. Byers, who resigned to accept a post with the Maryland State Health Department.

His office will be in the courthouse at Upper Marlboro instead of in the County Service Building at Hyattsville, where Dr. Byers made his headquarters.

$600 Savings Stolen

Thomas Kookos, 53, of 1014 12th st. nw., yesterday told police a thief stole between $600 and $650 from his room while he was at work. A cashier at the Kavakos Grill, 727 H st. ne., Kookos reported the money was savings he intended to mail to a sister in Greece.

Anti-Charter Unit Forms

A "Speakers' Bureau to Defeat the Charter" has been organized in Montgomery County by Sam Bogley, Bethesda real estate man and opponent of the proposed charter form of government for the county.

Bogley said he had received to the charter than he could fulfill.

Tank Blast Burns Man

Okie Garland McCormack, 24, of 414 A st. se., suffered second degree face burns yesterday when a gas tank he was soldering blew up in his face.

Detective Sergts. John Baker and Bernard Crook, said McCormack was repairing the tank in a shop at Creel Brothers, 1811 14th st. nw., when the fumes ignited. He was reported in fair condition in Emergency Hospital.

Red Cross Posts Filled

Four vacancies on the board of directors of Arlington County Chapter, American Red Cross, have been filled with the election to the board of Supt. Fletcher Kemp, 2016 N. Adams st.; Mrs. John F. Cady, 2824 S. Abingdon st.; Ashton C. Jones, 2732 Wilson blvd., and Arthur R. Pohponio, 875 N. Kensington st.

3 Women Held in Lottery

Three women arrested on lottery charges were held on $1500 bond yesterday for further hearing January 27.

Appearing before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage on charges of operating a lottery and possession of lottery slips, they are:

Emma C. Stokes, 45, of 1716 E st. ne., May Madeline Otto, 58, of 1022 6th st, sw., and Agnes Blackstone, 37, of 1005½ 6th st. sw.

Fires in Va. District Burn Over 2000 Acres

Winchester, Va., Jan. 14 (Spl.).—Forest fires ravaged 2001 acres in the seventh District of Virginia last year, according to the annual report of the Virginia Forest Service.

The report listed a total of 83 fires in the district during the year, including eight in Frederick County and three in Clarke County. Augusta County had the most fires, with 20 reported, while only one occurred in Shenandoah County, the report said.

Anne Arundel Awaits Registrar Appointment

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 14 (AP).—The permanent registration system for voters will go into effect in Anne Arundel County as soon as Governor Lane names a Republican to serve as one of the registrars.

The county commissioners decided to set up the arrangement yesterday.

Wilmer Watson, clerk to the supervisors, will serve as the Democratic registrar, and the Governor will select his appointee on recommendation of the Republican State Central Committee of the county.

Won't Seek Office, Randolph Declares

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 14 (AP).—Former Representative Jennings Randolph put at rest today the rumors about his political aspirations by stating that "I shall not be a candidate for public office this year."

The 46-year-old Elkins Democrat, who served seven terms from the Second District before his defeatin 1946 by Representative Melvin C. Snyder, Kingwood Republican, added in a statement that "my decision has been difficult to make."

Randolph resides with his wife and two sons at 4608 Reservoir rd., in Washington.

Court Rule Awaited In Gambling Cases

Fifteen gambling cases transferred from St. Mary's County will not be tried in Montgomery County Circuit Court pending a ruling by the Maryland Court of Appeals, officials said yesterday.

The case now before the appellate court, one of a group of indictments which followed a court sponsored crackdown on slot machines, was appealed on the basis that the grand jury which indicated the group was improperly impaneled.

Baltimore Seaman Held In Death of Woman

Baltimore, Jan. 14 (AP).—Herbert de Boissiere, 19-year-old Baltimore seaman, was held without bail for grand jury action today on a charge of shooting and killing Miss Vivian Crowe.

Miss Crowe, who remained in a coma fo r106 days with a 32-caliber bullet lodged in her brain, died in University Hospital December 28.

Luray, Va., Jan. 14 (Special).—Walter Rogers, serving his fifth term as a member of the Page County board of supervisors, has been chosen as its chairman for the current year.

The board authorized Robert Huffman, county clerk, to prepare a budget for the coming year, but said action on the budget would be postponed pending settlement of an election dispute between two candidates for a remaining seat on the board. Election of Mohler Foltz, Democrat, by a two-vote majority was contested by Fred Karnes, independent candidate, and a three-judge court is slated to sit January 26 to determine whether a recount shall be authorized.

Fairfax Judge Sets Sanitary District Action

Fairfax Circuit Court Judge Paul E. Brown yesterday scheduled for public hearing March 2 a proposal to create a sanitary district in northeast Fairfax County.

Brown set the hearing, which will be held in Circuit Court, after receiving a petition asking him to create a district embracing the McLean - Chesterbrook Woods - Langley area. The petition was signed by 64 qualified voters.

Creation of the district would enable the residents to vote on a bond issue for the construction of water and sewer systems. It would include an area of 7 square miles with about 1000 houses.

The petition was circulated by a citizens' committee, which estimated that a water, fire protection and sewage disposal system could be installed for $1,700,000, a sum which would be self-liquidating over a 40-year period.

Md. Tobacco Contest Prizes Total $1190

Prizes totaling $1190 will be awarded for the best tobacco specimens in a contest to be conducted by the Mitchellville (Md.) Citizens Association at 8 p. m. tomorrow in the Upper Marlboro High School.

The contest, open to all members of the association, is in conjunction with the group's annual "tobacco meeting." The top prize will be $100, with about 30 lesser prizes of cash and merchandise.

Each contestant will be required to submit one sample of tobacco consisting of 10 hands, each containing from 12 to 15 leaves.

All samples will become the property of the association and will be auctioned off at the close of the meeting to raise funds for the organization, according to Shelton E. Reynolds, president.

Chairman of the judging committee will be W. B. Posey, specialist in tobacco at the University of Maryland.

An entertainment program will feature the University of Maryland student band, directed by Frank Sykora, and the university glee club, under B. Harlan Randall.

Woman Is Held In Shooting of Martinsburg Man

Charles Town, W. Va., Jan. 14 (AP).—Jefferson County Prosecutor John Skinner announced tonight that Miss Della Johnson, about 45, was being held on a "technical charge" of manslaughter in the death of Bruce Orem, 44, of Martinsburg.

Skinner said Orem, who was married and had one child, was found with a bullet wound in his stomach early last Saturday in the home of Fred Johnson, Della's brother, at Cabletown, about four miles from here.

The prosecutor said Orem first told authorities he had shot himself, but later told State Trooper L. W. Kelly that he "thought" someone else had shot him.

Orem died last night in a Martinsburg hospital.

Skinner said the shooting climaxed a two-day party held at the Cabletown home.

B. & O. Due to Abandon Station at Frederick

Frederick, Md., Jan. 14 (Spl.).—The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad has informed city officials that workmen will begin removing the rails on East All Saints street, between Carroll and Market streets, this week. Removal of the tracks means the present passenger station of the railroad will be abandoned. It is understood arrangements are being made to provide a ticket window and waiting room at the railroad freight depot.

No decision has been reached regarding disposition of the passenger station, which is a Frederick landmark.

Navy Pilot Unhurt In Maryland Crash

Patuxent River, Md., Jan. 14 (AP).—A Navy jet fighter plane was destroyed in a crash near Galesville, Anne Arundel County, today but the pilot emerged unhurt, officials of the Patuxtent River Naval Air Test Center reported.

Lieut. Eugene R. Hanks, a test pilot in the service test division at the test center, told officials he was forced to crash-land the plane when jets failed.

50 in Town Join

Group Plans Port Tobacco Restoration

Formation of an organization to "promote restoration of the historic early American town of Port Tobacco, Md.," has been announced by a group of residents of the community.

About 50 persons living in the town have joined in the movement, which has resulted in formation of the Historical Society for the Restoration of Port Tobacco. Capt. Robert T. Barbour has been chosen as its first president, while other officers are George I Gardiner, vice president, and Mrs. Henry DeMott, secretary-treasurer.

The officers have been authorized to formulate a restoration program and appoint a committee to draw up plans for a permanent association. These plans will be outlined at the next meeting of the group, which has been set for February 6 at the Port Tobacco Valley home of Col. and Mrs. Peter Vischer.

The association's program will center on efforts to persuade individuals to restore old Port Tobacco homes as investments, and to rebuild new homes on the foundations of some of the older town structures. It also proposes to rebuild the old St. Charles Hotel, largest of the town's early hostelries, for use as an apartment house.

Sketches of old Port Tobacco buildings, collected by Captain Barbour, will be used in the restoration program, according to tentative plans.

Council Candidate Open Campaign In Alexandria

Alexandria's political pot started boiling yesterday as candidates for the six ward seats on the city council began electioneering for the April 6 Democratic primary.

Marshall J. Beverley, who announced his candidacy last week, questioned the present council's spending policy, asserting the city tax structure survey now under way offers no evidence "to prove the money already collected from tax sources is being spent wisely."

Others who have announced they will enter the primary include: John T. Worthington, 506 W. Braddock rd., Fifth Ward; William E. Sellers, 106 E. Del Ray ave., Sixth Ward, and Incumbent Councilmen John J. Ewald, Third Ward, and Edward W. Downey, Sixth Ward. First Ward Councilman Paul L. Delaney has said he will not run.

Pedestrian, Struck, Draws Traffic Fine

An Alexandria man, struck by a taxi Saturday night, was fined $10 yesterday in Alexandria Civil and Police Court on a charge of impeding traffic.

James Lewis, 34, 708 Gibbon st., walked between two parked cars, police said, into the path of a cab in the 600 block of Queen st.

Witness Puts Rakes' Assets At $817,000

Richmond, Va., Jan. 14 (AP).—Coleman D. Gore, Fredericksburg land appraiser, told a Federal District Court here today that Hugh N. Rakes, Leesburg dairyman, owned mortgage-free properties valued at $817,000—an amount which he said was poor security for a $750,000 bank obligation.

Gore was called to the stand by District Attorney George R. Humrickhouse as one of the final witnesses in a case against Rakes and his wife, both charged with aiding in the misapplication of more than $435,000 from the Farmers & Merchants State Bank of Fredericksburg.

The Government is attempting to prove that Rakes did not have enough assets to back up his complicated financial negotiations and that it was because of these manipulations that the Fredericksburg bank was liquidated.

(The defunct bank held papers guaranteed by Rakes which bore a purported value of $750,000 when the Federal Deposit Insurance Co. took them over and sold them to the Jefferson Standard Insurance Co. of Greensboro, N. C., for $225,000.)

100 Poultrymen Attend Session At Lincolnia, Va.

H. L. Moore, chief of the poultry department of Virginia Polytechnic Institute, spoke on the outlook and decommendations for the 1948 poultry program.

Dr. D. M. Davis of the University of Maryland discussed poultry diseases, while Hollis Shomo, chief of the poultry section of the Virginia Department of Agriculture, spoke on the flock owner's part in breed improvement. A program of rat control was outlined to the group by Kenneth C. Peterson, assistant Fairfax County agent.

Middleburg, Va., Jan. 14.—Philip Connors, of Middleburg, was added to the board of directors of the Middleburg National Bank at the annual meeting of the stockholders today. Other directors were reelected and the same officers were named.

John M. Polk

Tryon, N. C., Jan. 14 (AP).—John M. Polk, Tryon lawyer and a naval officer during World War II, died at his home here Monday after an illness of several months.

He was a son of Frank Polk, Assistant Secretary of State in the Woodrow Wilson Cabinet. During the war he served on the staff of Fleet Admiral Ernest J. King.

He is survived by his widow, the former Virginia Brand, who is a niece of Lady Astor.

County Parents Ask D. C. Hearing On Tuition Ruling

Nineteen Montgomery County parents whose children attend District schools yesterday petitioned the Commissioners for a hearing on tuition payments.

In a letter to the Commissioners, the parents asked that a hearing be held on reconsideration of a ruling of the Corporation Counsel that out-of-town students are exempt from payment only if the were in attendance in District schools before July 1 and at the time exempt from tuition.

One of the parents, Robert Van Sickler, 4707 Bagard blvd., Crestview, Md., said that parents feel that the Corporation Counsel incorrectly interpreted the current District Appropriations Act, which ended the exemption for students except those already "enrolled."

The Maryland students, while not in attendance in District schools, had signed up for the classes before the deadline. They were among 1731 out-of-town students billed by the Board of Education on Monday.

Virginian, 75, Killed by Auto; Driver Arrested

A 75-year-old Sterling, Va., man was killed instantly Tuesday night when struck by a car on Route 28, a mile south of Centerville in Fairfax County.

Fairfax police said Fred Corum was walking on the right side of the road, to avoid the snow, when hit by a car driven by Luther R. Stanley, 24, of Manassas.

Stanley told police he was blinded by lights of an approaching truck and did not see Corum until it was too late to stop.

Police arrested Stanley on a charge of reckless driving by having improper brakes. He was released on $500 bond for hearing January 21.

Gray Ladies Needed

An appeal for more Gray Ladies to serve at the Bethesda Naval Hospital was issued yesterday by the Montgomery County Chapter, American Red Cross. Further information may be obtained at the Chapter House, 4711 Highland ave., Bethesda, or by calling Oliver 3296.

Allen F. Edwards

Detroit, Jan. 14 (AP).—Allen F. Edwards, 71, an original board member of Chysler Corp. and a transportation executive in Michigan for a number of years, died Tuesday.

A native of Crawford, Ga., he began his business career in New York with the Yonkers Railroad, where he became general superintendent. He later served as general manager of the Electric Light & Railway Co. of Petersburg, Va.

Edwards came to Detroit in 1900 as general manager of the Toledo & Monroe and then general manager of the Detroit & Toledo Shore Line Railroad. He later became vice president of the Detroit United Railroads before it was taken over by the city.

James E. Morrow, Ex-WAA And Motor Official, Is Dead

Dunedin, Fla., Jan. 14 (AP).—James Edwin Morrow, 68, prominent for years in the motor car industry and a former War Assets Administration official, died yesterday.

At one time he was vice president and general manager of the Willys Overland Automobile Co. and worked with the Curtiss-Wright Co. in developing airplane motors.

He began his industrial career Coaster Brake Co. which was as a test rider for the Morrow founded by his father who invented the Morrow coaster brake for bicycles.

After World War I he managed the Folker Aircraft Corp. plant at Teterboro, N. J. During World War II he was vice president of the Machinery Builders Association, Long Island, N. Y. He was named to the WAA shortly after the last war and served for two years. He retired in 1947 and came here.

Survivors include his wife: three sons, James E. Morrow, jr., and William P. Morrow of New York City, Arthur C. Morrow of Palm Harbor, Fla; one daughter Mrs. William Fueristen of Suffern, N. Y., and one sister, Mrs. Henry G. Fox of Elmira, N. Y.

Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

Mullen Gets Fire Post

Richmond, Va., Jan. 14 (AP).—The State Corporation Commission today announced the appointment of C. S. Mullen, jr., as chief fire marshal of Virginia to succeed James A. Hayes.

Witness Puts Rakes' Assets At $817,000

Richmond, Va., Jan. 14 (AP).—Coleman D. Gore, Fredericksburg land appraiser, told a Federal District Court here today that Hugh N. Rakes, Leesburg dairyman, owned mortgage-free properties valued at $817,000—an amount which he said was poor security for a $750,000 bank obligation.

Gore was called to the stand by District Attorney George R. Humrickhouse as one of the final witnesses in a case against Rakes and his wife, both charged with aiding in the misapplication of more than $435,000 from the Farmers & Merchants State Bank of Fredericksburg.

The Government is attempting to prove that Rakes did not have enough assets to back up his complicated financial negotiations and that it was because of these manipulations that the Fredericksburg bank was liquidated.

(The defunct bank held papers guaranteed by Rakes which bore a purported value of $750,000 when the Federal Deposit Insurance Co. took them over and sold them to the Jefferson Standard Insurance Co. of Greensboro, N. C., for $225,000.)

100 Poultrymen Attend Session At Lincolnia, Va.

More than 100 poultrymen from 10 Virginia counties, and from Maryland and the District attended a flock owners meeting yesterday at the Grassy Knoll Hatchery, Lincolnia, Va.

H. L. Moore, chief of the poultry department of Virginia Polytechnic Institute, spoke on the outlook and decommendations for the 1948 poultry program.

Dr. D. M. Davis of the University of Maryland discussed poultry diseases, while Hollis Shomo, chief of the poultry section of the Virginia Department of Agriculture, spoke on the flock owner's part in breed improvement. A program of rat control was outlined to the group by Kenneth C. Peterson, assistant Fairfax County agent.

Sees Wallace Support From "Unthinking People"

Only Strong U. S. Can Work With Russia, Mrs. Roosevelt Says, But Decries War Talk

By Genevieve Reynolds

THE United States can get along with Russia, but only if we remain stronger than they—spiritually, economically, and militarily. So declared Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, chairman of the Human Rights Commission of the United Nations, at a luncheon meeting of the Women's National Press Club at the Statler Hotel yesterday.

The Former First Lady deplored "loose talk" of war between the United States and Russia as "extraordinarily dangerous." We can work with Russia, through the United Nations, she maintained, if in all our dealings we show strength—the only quality they respect.

To illustrate just how much the Russians respect strength even in minor situations, she recalled a Soviet U. N. delegate remarking to her, "We have worked hard and late. My wife is tired but you don't seem to be.

"I like the Russians personally but I know I can't let them pull anything over me and get away with it," insisted the former First Lady. "Their respect is for the strength of power and masses. They don't consider small things. And the individual doesn't count at all."

Pointing out that the Russians consider our democratic way of life weak, Mrs. Roosevelt said that they always are surprised it doesn't collapse but are betting on reaping the benefits if we have another depression.

Querried on Marshall Plan

When asked if Europe could recover and have peace under the Marshall Plan, she replied, "Yes, if we don't give too little too late," adding "but the people of Europe have to see that they have a real chance for recovery. Otherwise they will sink into apathy."

Mrs. Roosevelt expressed a doubt that the Marshall Plan could have been handled by the U. N. at the present time. She said it could not have acted quickly and directly enough.

'Unthinking' for Wallace

Admitting that it is difficult to determine now the effects of Wallace's third party, she asserted, "Wallace's candidacy will draw supporters from both the Democratic and Republican parties. But his supporters will be "unthinking" people.

"How many people will accept his promise of 'peace, abundance and security' without thinking about how it will be achieved," she continued, "can't be told now."

Just back from the Geneva Conference on the Human Rights Commission, Mrs. Roosevelt gave her first public account of the proceedings. She told how the commission drew up a Declaration of Human Rights which set forth aspirations, a convention and implementation.

In working with the Soviet delegates at the conference she said that she found them cooperative on social and economic questions in the declaration; that they were anxious to see everything pertaining to jobs and houses spelled out; that the Soviets took no interest in the general freedoms such as speech and religion and that they didn't vote once on anything. However, she expressed amazement that they had expressed interest in any of the proceedings. "That was an important accomplishment," she said.

Decries Complacency

Mrs. Roosevelt compared the complacency of the United States with that of Switzerland. She said that the Swiss considered their mountains sufficient barriers and the United States depended upon the oceans.

Blasting the attitude of both, she said, "to revert to isolationism would be suicide for the United States."

Asked if we could ignore Russia and still have peace with the cooperation of other nations, she replied that we would create a division in the world which would be unwise and that while we might enforce peace for a while the only way to have lasting peace is by cooperation of the world as a whole.

The former First Lady denied a previous newspaper report stating that she had said "I have no politics," after a talk with President Truman.

"I said that I am not in politics," explained Mrs. Roosevelt. "I represent the people and the Government. But, of course, I am a Democrat."

Also she explained that she had not been asked to head the President's food program, but had been invited to head a consumer group. She said that she had declined because of inability to give full time to the job.

Guests at the head table included Lady Inverchapel, wife of the British Ambassador; the director general of the Food and Agriculture Organization, Sir John Orr, and Lady Orr; Mrs. Roosevelt's personal secretary, Miss Malvina Thompson; Mrs. James Helm, White House social secretary; Mrs. Laura Lou Brookman, editor of the Ladies Home Journal; Mrs. George Mesta and Mrs. Genevieve Herrick.

Pierre Bedard, Miss Winter Married

Of interest in Washington is the announcement of the marriage January 11 in New York of Miss Gertrude King Winter of New York, to Pierre Bedard.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Henry Otis King of Claremont, N. H. Mr. Bedard, son of Mrs. Joseph Armand Bedard of Lynn, Mass., and the late Dr. Beddard, is now head of the French Institute of the United States with headquarters in New York.

During the early years of the war he was in Washington as American Counselor to the French Military Mission. In the first World War he was interpreter and a code officer on the staff of Gen. Tasker Bliss, American Military Representative to the Supreme War Council at Versailles. He was graduated from Harvard University in the 1917 class and is a member of the Harvard Club and the Metropolitan Club of Washington.

Mr. Bedard and his bride left for Cuba on their wedding trip and after a few days at the Nacional Hotel in Havana they will be guests at the plantation owned by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Mack.

MRS LEO G. LA NEVE
. . . Quebec honeymoon

La Neve—Sala

At a nuptial mass in St. Matthew's Cathedral yesterday, Miss Margarite Josephine Sala, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Antonio Ferre of Ponce, Puerto Rico, became the bride of Leo George La Neve, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis La Neve of Cumberland, Md. The Rev. John Argaut officiated.

Given in marriage by her brother, Dr. Luis Sala, the bride wore a white satin gown made in Havana, Cuba, and a diamond necklace and earrings which are family heirlooms. Her veil fell from a tiara of orange blossoms and pearls and she carried white orchids and lilies of the valley.

The bride was attended by Miss Adriana Mercado, maid of honor, and Mrs. Luis Sala and Mrs. Benjamin La Neve, bridesmaids. All were gowned in ice blue satin. Miss Mercado carried red roses and the others had bouquets of yellow roses.

William La Neve served as best man and ushers were Leo Walker and Benjamin La Neve, brother of the bridegroom.

After a reception in the Chinese Room of the Mayflower, the newlyweds left on a wedding trip to Quebec, Canada. On their return they will make their home in Cumberland. The bride attended Beaver College in Jenkintown, Pa., and Mr. La Neve is an alumnus of St. Francis College, Loretto, Pa.

Cooper—Sumner

Miss Mabel Ruth Sumner, daughter of Mrs. Francis Joseph Sumner and the late Mr. Sumner, was married yesterday to Harold Bruce Cooper, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Franklin Cooper of Tuscumbia, Ala. The wedding took place in the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church with the Rev. Peter Marshall officiating.

Escorted by her eldest brother, Francis Joseph Sumner, jr., the bride wore a winter white dress with orchid corsage. Mrs. Robert Byng Hall attended her sister as matron of honor, wearing an aquamarine ensemble. The bridegroom's father served as best man and ushers were Robert Byng Hall and Maurice Schoch.

Mr. and Mrs. Cooper will make their home in Washington after a honeymoon in New York.

Sanderson-Horesky

Miss Mable Lorraine Horesky, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John B. Horesky of Norton, Kans., became the bride of LeRoy Archer Sanderson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl I. Sanderson of Washington, January 9. The ceremony took place at North Carolina Avenue Methodist Church, the Rev. Elmer Wilcher officiating.

Given in marriage by her mother, the bride wore a gown of white satin fashioned with sweetheart neckline and fingertip veil. She carried white roses centered with white orchids.

Mrs. Albert King of Washington was matron of honor, dressed in orchid taffeta with matching Juliet cap. The bridesmaids were Miss Virginia Sanderson, sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Marie Shaeffer of Johnstown, Pa.

Carl I. Sanderson, jr., brother of the bridegroom, was best man and the ushers were Heny Hendrix and Joseph Sudano.

Mr. Sanderson served with Army Air Forces during the war and until recently was with the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administation. He is now attending American University.

American Women Defy 'New Look,' Says Communist

London, Jan. 14 (U.P.)—Pravda, the Russian Communist Party organ, explained American women's "revolt" against the "new look" today by claiming that long skirts were forced on them by the titans of the fashion industry.

The newspaper's New York correspondent, Uri Zhukov, in a dispatch broadcast by Radio Moscow, linked opposition to the style change with "sinister, depressing changes" which have overtaken the economy of the United States, "where inflation is already undermining the living standards of millions of families."

"But American women energetically resisted this fashion, he said.

Fashion Row Is Petticoat Lane With Swish of Taffeta Underskirts

By Peggy Preston
Post Reporter

NEW YORK, N. Y., Jan. 14.—The petticoat is haunting this winter's sessions of New York Dress Institute Press Week as insistently as Hamlet's ghost.

And not one petticoat, mind you, but two and three at a time. That's how many the models were wearing today at the showing of Adele Simpson's clothes. First silk, then taffeta, then starched organdie and over all that a billowing skirt. We've been seeing them all along, of course, but not in quite so many layers.

Fashion editors blinked and one from St. Louis said plaintively, "It's too hot to wear petticoats in my home town." From another came "What about the laundry problem?" Miss Simpson's answer was to wear a stiff silk one attached to the dress and it can be cleaned as one garment. You don't have to wear a lot of petticoats, she assured us, but your dress will look better if you do.

There isn't any doubt these full skirts require a different type of undergarment than what women are wearing now. With an ordinary slip the skirts lose their "extended look," fall in flat folds. But whether women are going to don voluminous underskirts is certainly open to question.

ONLY other question to the silhouette problem in high fashion circles comes from Hattie Carnegie. She makes little use of petticoats, but she achieves the same effect by retaining some hip padding and stiffening the skirts with buckram squares around the inside of the hem. So there it is, hip padding or petticoats, take your choice.

Miss Simpson showed her collection this morning and it was one of the most wearable of the week, despite the petticoats. She offered a series of dresses and coat-dresses that will delight career girls because of their versatility. They are the kind that will "go anywhere," from office to dinner. One ensemble that is sure to make a hit is a print silk, with an extra skirt and bolero of wool that can be worn either as a dress or a suit.

Practically every garment follows the pattern we've seen set here this week; small top, rounded shoulders, spindle waist, full, swinging skirt and pushup sleeves. But she does this silhouette exceedingly well, designing with restraint for the average American woman who is under 5 feet, 5 inches tall.

She has gone completely romantic, like all the others. Cute little shawl boleros are tossed over skirtwaists, often they are plaid and bound in old-fashioned fringe, demure fichus circle bare-topped evening frocks. Pink eyelet embroidered petticoats peek from under a short dinner dress of violet chambray and small-waisted coats of black bengaline and alpaca have a quaint and charming air.

MISS CARNEGIE'S showing was a definite highlight of the week. But because we reviewed her collection when she previewed it in Washington before the Republican Women's Club last month, we are not going to give a detailed description this time.

However, there are a few important factors that we missed in our previous review. For one thing, Miss Carnegie is the only designer who makes a serious attempt to continue with the slim skirt idea. Her skirts are almost evenly divided between the slim and the full versions.

Many of the skirts have high, extended waistbands with loose pleating just below the band.

QUAINT little costume touches, such as the fringed plaid jacket above, are being used frequently by designers this year. This one is by Adele Simpson who found inspiration in the Victorian period. The bolero in black and white plaid wool has cuffed dolman sleeves. A white crepe blouse tucks into a dull black woolen skirt belted in black patent leather

Tiny, jutting peplums on the jackets create the effect of full hips over a slim, tapering skirt. Maurice Rentner is another designer who creates skirts of this type, but not to the extent to which Hattie Carnegie does.

She also has some interesting coats which are a departure from the fitted, princess coat that is being widely featured everywhere. They, too, are both slim and full. One, which she calls a "bulb" is almond-shaped, cut fairly wide at the shoulders with dolman sleeves and tapers down to a tight hemline. A wide, flaring coat of blue wool is serviceable in that it can swing free or be worn as a tight, wrap-around.

Worker's Dilemma

Here's How To Slim Down Padded Hips

By Ida Jean Kain

The 9-to-5 girl is in a dismal dilemma. She must either exercise or put up with the consequences—upholstered hips.

Hips, in a way, are an occupational hazard. It's not that sitting is spreading—but it isn't exercise, either. There's the rub. Muscles that are not kept in tone, spread—and after all, an eight-hour working day squanders quite a lot of a girl's time. The unused muscles get soft and soft muscles are not shapely. Worse, they tend to take on fat padding.

Floor Helps

A good disciplinary measure is to apply the flat of the floor to the backsides of the hips—in other words, rolling. The floor's solid surface will not yield, so bulges must back down.

Position—Lie on back on floor, legs straight down, arms down at sides but out away from body.

Movement—Roll straight across the hip span over to one thigh line, then roll back across the hip span over to the other thigh line, and keep it up for 15 counts. Make this a slow-movement exercise and bring the weight to bear heavily on the biggest part of the hip.

Position—Lie on back on floor, knees flexed, arms out at sides, shoulder level.

Movement—Raising the feet slightly off the floor, and with knees bent and held together, roll across the hips clear over until one thigh is resting on floor. Then roll back across the hips until the other thigh is resting on floor. This is an all-around good toner.

To remove a back-porch effect, try the semisitting roll.

Position—Sitting on floor, legs straight out in front, lean back and place palms on floor at either side toward the back.

Movement—Giving a push, roll across the hip padding over to one side and back over to the other—a sort of rocking motion. Rock back and forth for 20 counts, later twice as many. This is an effective hip slimmer.

Pin Cushion Rolls

To reach the pin cushion of fat that bunches up on the side of the hip, try this exercise.

Position—Stand in back of a straight chair, arm's length away from chair, right hand on chair for balance. Place left hand on hip pad.

Movement—Swing the left leg, directing angle of swing straight through the pad which will make it toward the side but slightly back. Tense leg and hip muscles as you swing and keep knee stiff. Swing 12 counts, then swing with other leg.

What It Takes To Be Lovely

"You've got what it takes to be lovely," says the January issue of Charm, the magazine for the business girl, and advises its readers how to make the most with what they have.

Your beauty is already there, according to Charm, and should be kept at its loveliness maximum. Eyes should sparkle, skin glow, hair be brushed to a high polish and hands and figure be graceful and well groomed. Money should not be an obstacle because there is always fresh air, pure water and exercise on your own two feet.

Ask Anne Your Questions on Homemaking

The window in my kitchen sticks just enough to be annoying but not enough to have it repaired. Are there any home measures I can apply to keep it from sticking? R. W. G.

Wax, applied to the sides, is one of the best remedies for sticky windows. It's easiest to apply in liquid form. Of course, if the window is too swelled for this to be effective, you'll have to have it taken out and planed off—or learn a few new cuss words to use when it sticks!

I have two water glasses that are stuck together and I just can't seem to get them apart. I am afraid of breaking them if I try to force one out of the other. Have you any suggestions? L. K.

Dip the outside glass in warm (not hot) water. At the same time, put cold (not iced) water into the inside glass. The resulting shrinkage and expansion of the glass will enable you to separate them.

To D. F., who recently asked for suggestions to prevent liquids and creams from spilling while traveling, I would like to offer my solution: Light a candle and hold so that drippings seal cap. It looks a bit messy, but we travel a great deal and I simply soften the wax to reseal each time I must repack. I. M. L.

Can you give me a bleach to remove ink stains from a fine cotton baby dress? N. G.

If the stain is fresh, you may be able to take it out through the use of glycerine or of one of the soapless shampoos. Apply glycerine to spot, rub lightly between the hands, rinse and apply glycerine again as long as any ink comes from the stain. If this isn't effective, use one of the commercial ink removers sold in drug and department stores. These are not harmful to white fabrics if rinsed out immediately.

I have a lovely rayon silk tie that is stained from cranberry juice. How can I remove the stain? I have tried several types of dry cleaning fluid without success. D. C.

From what you say about using dry cleaning fluid, I take it that water may spot this material. If this is true, I'd advise taking the tie immediately to an experienced dry cleaner, telling him what made the spot, and asking him to remove it. There is a treatment with glycerine, water, and vinegar that you might use to remove the cranberry stain if it won't affect the colors in the tie. This could be tried out first on some inconspicuous place—the part of the tie that comes at the back of the neck, for instance. Here's the procedure: Sponge stain with cool water; then work gylcerine or soapless shampoo into the stain, rubbing lightly between the hands. Let stand several hours, then apply a few drops of vinegar, allow to remain for a minute or two, then rinse thoroughly in water.

Is there any place in Washington where "Sandwich" or "old glass" is sold or on display? A. C. K.

The Smithsonian Institution has displays of old glass, including Sandwich glass, in two of its buildings—the Natural History Building and the Arts and Industries Building. This glass is, of course, not for sale. However, numerous antique shops in this area sell old glass. One that has a particularly fine collection of Sandwich glass is located on the Colesville Pike near Silver Spring. It is operated in connection with a well-known restaurant. The telephone number is Shepherd 3500 if you want directions for reaching it.

How can a cloudy film (surface deposit) on the rim and edges of a cut glass crystal fruit bowl be removed? Scraping with a razor blade helps, but may scratch glass. M. S.

Turn the bowl upside down in a shallow pan of vinegar and let it soak. Or place vinegar-soaked cloth around its edge and let it remain an hour or so. Moisten cloth with vinegar as it dries out. At the end of this soaking, scrub edge of bowl carefully with some scratchless cleansing powder, such as whiting or others sold under commercial trade names. Finish with washing in warm water and soapsuds and rinsing with clear water.

Please give me instructions for removing oleum percomorphum from clothing—both cotton and rayon. The articles have been washed and ironed. Will this make a difference? Some of the stained articles are colored. Will the method remove the color? L. M. O.

Stains made by any of the fish oils are very difficult, if not impossible, to remove if the garments have been washed and ironed. However, you might try this: Moisten the stain with water and dust with powdered pepsin. Allow to stand for 30 minutes to soften the stain and sponge with a grease solvent such as carbon tetrachloride. If this removes the stain, wash the entire garment in warm soapy water. If this doesn't remove the stain, using a bleach might lighten the stains, but unless the colors are very fast this method might also change the color.

Sometimes articles are so stained that they are not usable in their present condition. If this is true of your articles and you wish to chance a treatment even though it might affect the color, try this: A safe bleach for cottons as well as rayons is sodium perborate. Stretch the stained portion over a bowl of hot water, dampen the stain with the water and dust the powdered perborate on it. Let stand a minute or two and then immerse the stain into the bowl of water. Rinse the perborate from the fabric well and work quickly to lessen the chance of changing the color.

Are there any Government or high school adult educational classes that teach the making of plastic articles? Are there any private classes in Washington? V. M. P.

There is a hobby shop in Georgetown whose proprietors expect to start a class next month in making plastic articles with home equipment. For further information, get in touch with them by calling Dupont 8363.

During Man's War Service, His Beloved Wife Changed From Good Companion Into Morbidly Fearful Recluse; Now Infidelity Threatens

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: We have been married 15 years. My wife is 35 and I am 40. She claims she loves me dearly and I've always loved her; but on my return from overseas two years ago I was much disappointed to find she had changed. She was a nervous wreck and still is.

Before I went to war we were the best of companions. We went everywhere together, gave parties, mixed with our friends and saw lots of people. Now she won't go anywhere with me. She avoids crowds and won't see people, including our friends.

She stays home all day by herself and lately I notice she is getting neglectful of her appearance and the housework. She says she gets weak spells while working and has to lie down. She also says everything seems unreal, as if she were living in another world.

I find I dread to come home in the evenings, as her whole discourse is about her ailments. I too am tired and feel nervous many evenings, but I never complain. And here of late, because of the home situation, I've done something I never dreamed I would do. I know it's wrong, but I feel driven to it.

Sweet Secretary Solaces Him Now

I HAVE been seeing my secretary, a sweet girl, 30, who is always in good spirits and believes in enjoying life. She feels sorry for my wife but says she will never change and when I get a divorce she will marry me. As to that, I've never even told the girl I love her, and I can't bring myself to leave my wife.

I have tried to be a good husband. I don't drink or gamble; I have given her a nice home, a car, everything her heart desires, and I have been true to her until recently. She doesn't suspect I have been out with my secretary when I get home late.

I have taken her to several doctors, all of whom say she is in perfect health. In fact, one doctor told her a baby would cure her nervousness, but she says a child would only make her more nervous. Now I have an offer to work in another city; and maybe the change would help my wife. Also I would no longer see the girl. What should I do? I am so confused. Please advise me. S. R.

Wife Is Really Critically Ill

DEAR S. R.: Apparently the examining physician didn't delve very deeply into the story of your wife's distress. Her symptoms you mention are as pronounced in general significance as, say, a chronic fever temperature or bleeding stomach ulcers would be.

They clearly indicate emotional illness, potentially as destructive of general health as, say, an onslaught of tuberculosis or cancer. The cause should be psychiatrically probed and alleviated.

In all such cases, the seeds of illness are planted in childhood; but many persons thus incipiently handicapped are never overtaken by the lurking threat if they have the good fortune to live a consistently sheltered existence in adult years, in relation to a closely devoted protective companion who represents security and leadership to them.

Thus while your war-induced separation from your wife can't be construed as the primary cause of her serious condition, it is definitely probable that the experience—one of inner loneliness and sustained anxiety for your welfare—fertilized the seeds of latent illness into the open; into mind-darkening, waking nightmare proportions. In which state you found her on your return.

There Is Hope For Recovery

HER CASE isn't hopeless per se. Your secretary, a buzzard of sorts, is peddling wishful thinking in line with her own scheming purposes, in stating that view. And while on the subject of her, my advice is to solve that problem—of propinquity proffering temptation—by giving her notice to find another job. Wave her off and devote your whole mind to being tender and true to your wife in this crisis.

Due to the fact that you do sincerely cherish your wife and would do all in your power to restore her to health and good companionship, there is much reason to hope for her full recovery, inasmuch as psychiatric therapy has a growing history of effectiveness in healing such illness as hers.

The only hurdle is the comparative scarcity of psychiatric resources. I am not sure there are such in your community; hence I suggest you write to Dr. George S. Stevenson, medical director, National Committee for Mental Hygiene, 1790 Broadway, New York City, for steering information or a reference list of such specialists thereabouts. M. H.

New Idea of Baby's Schodule Is 'Feed Him When He Cries'

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

The self-demand way of feeding babies is gradually supplanting the regulated schedule. Today the baby is fed when he cries to be fed, and not when the clock says it is time.

Arnold Gesell, in "Infant and Child in the Culture of Today," asks: "How does the child register his self-demands?" He answers, "By his behavior . . . The infant is fed when he is hungry; he is allowed to sleep when he is sleepy; he is not aroused to be fed; he is changed when he fusses on being wet; he is granted social play when he craves it."

This all takes into account that the mother shall be alert to the meaning of cries. If she is not, this ideal may break down into excesses and failure of the principle of self-demand.

What happens so often is that a mother, told to feed a baby when it cries, interprets every whimper as a need for food, and stuffs the poor, hapless infant until there is good reason for crying.

Even with a self-demand schedule—if there is breast milk, or an adequate formula for the baby—meals will seldom come oftener than once in three hours. The stomach demands some time to digest what it gets.

Also, while the baby is establishing his schedule he is in the process of being introduced to the family pattern of living.

Postlude

Memorable Playing by Menuhin

By Paul Hume

Yehudi Menuhin can do anything he wants to with a violin.

Last night's concert in Constitution Hall was an exhibition of what he wanted to do, and at times, of what he did not much care about doing.

Thus we had a towering performance of Bela Bartok's unaccompanied sonata in G Major, and a poetically lyrical reading of Beethoven's sonata in F Major, known as the "Spring" sonata. To the greatness of the playing, Adolph Baller contributed marvelous pianism. His collaboration was outstanding in every work and in every way.

Menuhin's affinity for the works of Bela Bartok is obvious in his playing, and in his constant programming of the late Hungarian master's writings. The third sonata, written for last night's soloist, is a succession of magnificent technical achievements, clothed in thrilling garb. The opening chaconne is equalled only by the great work in the same form in Johann Sebastian Bach's D minor sonata for the same instrument.

Dissonant counterpoint for solo violin is not generally considered the vehicle with which to attract and hold an audience, but Menuhin can be proud of the rapt attention his listeners gave him throughout a spectacular account of the work. Most amazing of the four movements is the fugue forming the second. Its granite theme is escorted through as imposing a development as any fugue of our acquaintance, only to emerge in identical simplicity at the close of the movement.

The melody of the third movement and the final presto are more accessible to public ears, but no less energetic and virile in their structure. The sonata is a tremendous accomplishment, and Menuhin made it memorable.

Group to Promote Restoration Of Port Tobacco

Formation of an organization to promote restoration of the historic early American town of Port Tobacco, Md.," was announced yesterday.

Some 50 Port Tobacco residents elected Capt. Robert T. Barbour president of the group. Other officers chosen were George I. Gardiner, vice president, and Mrs. Henry Vroom DeMott, secretary-treasurer.

The officers will formulate a restoration program and appoint a committee to draw up plans for a permanent association. The group seeks to have individuals restore old residences of the town as investments.

Port Tobacco, whose history antedates settlement of Maryland, was the seat of Charles County from 1658 to 1895.

The association will meet again February 6 at the Port Tobacco Valley home of Col. and Mrs. Peter Vischer.

Dealers Elect Winrub

Leon Winrub, president of the Leon Typewriter Co., 6th and D sts. nw., has been elected president of the Washington Office Machine Dealers' Association. Other officers are William Z. Jemison, of Dixie Typewriter Mart, Alexandria, vice president, and G. H. Cammerer, of Reliable Office Appliance Co., 151 D st. ne., secretary-treasurer.

Oystermen's Plan

'Equal Rights' Board Urged In River Row

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 14 (AP).—The Virginia Fisheries Association ged today the appointment of a mmission "whose sole duty will to determine" the meaning of qual rights" in the Virginia-aryland Potomac River oyster- controversy.

In a letter to Gov. William M. ck of Virginia made public by ssociaion Secretary V. L. Hodges, e fisheries group suggested fur- er that if necessary, legislation enacted to "define and correct e question of 'equal rights.'"

The association said its mem- rs were unanimously opposed to he Potomac River controversy ing extended to cover or include y other areas" at this time.

"It does not appear to us," the ter said "that the Potomac ver controversy has any parallel connection whatever with any ntroversy that either exists or ght arise between the States of aryland and Virginia as to fish- g rights and privileges in the esapeake Bay or its tributaries.

"Consequently, we feel that to clude two entirely separate and stinct issues under the authority one joint commission would ly tend to cloud and prolong the al issue or controversy."

High School Contract Let At La Plata

La Plata, Md., Jan. 14 (Spl.).—A 77,487 contract for construction the proposed La Plata High hool was awarded today to illiam F. Sutter of Nescopek, Pa. Thomas B. R. Mudd, chairman of e building committee, who an- unced the award, said construc- n probably would begin in the xt few weeks, with completion pected around February 1, 1949.

art of the building, however, will ready for occupancy at the be- nning of the new school term xt September.

When completed the new school ll serve as a central high school r Charles County, eliminating e of three other high schools in tlying sections of the county. he three schools, at Glasva, Nan- moy and Hughesville, will be nverted into junior high schools, d their senior pupils will be ansported by bus to La Plata.

Plans provide for construction a main building housing 12 assrooms, library, laboratories, mnasium, auditorium and an dministrative suite, and a sepa- te practical arts building. Both ll be built as additions to the esent building.

A contract for the project was warded after the building com- ittee was forced to revise plans r the building because original ds were greatly in excess of the gislative amount allotted, ac- rding to Mudd.

Ruling Rejects Bus Competition With Greyhound Locals

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 14 (AP).—Washington-Baltimore bus service on the Washington Boulevard furnished at local points by the Greyhound lines will continue without competition from Safeway Trails, the Court of Appeals ruled today.

The court declared it could not substitute its judgment for that of the Public Service Commission, which found Greyhound service adequate.

The case arose from two actions before the commission. In the first, Safeway, which had shared local passenger service with Greyhound for a period during the war, asked the commission to continue that service.

In the second, George D. Quigley, an Anne Arundel County resident, asked on behalf of many residents of the area that Safeway be given the privilege along with Greyhound.

At the commission hearings, many persons testified Greyhound service was inconvenient, that drivers were discourteous and passed up passengers who waited in foul weather.

The commission found that the service was "adequate," but it also ordered Greyhound to correct the below-standard service reported.

Safeway and Quigley filed appeals in the Prince Georges County court and their contentions were upheld. The case then went to the Court of Appeals, with the commission, Greyhound and Capital Transit Co. participating in the appeal.

Judge Stephen Collins wrote the opinion of the court.

Gov. Lane Inducted As Member of VFW

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 14 (AP).—Governor Lane was formally inducted as a member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars today at a ceremony at the State house.

The oath was administered by the department commander, Charles B. Buscher of Silver Spring. Attending were Reginald H. Murphy, jr., quartermaster of the department of Maryland; Henry F. Segelken, commander of the Annapolis post, and Deputy Junior Vice Commander George F. Ridenour, who also heads the Hagerstown post.

Foul Play Not Ruled Out In Man's Disappearance

Ocean City, Md., Jan. 14 (AP).—After working for two months on the unsolved disappearance of 60-year-old Fred H. Hastings, State's Attorney Franklin Upshur said today he still is "not discounting the possibility that Hastings met with foul play."

The State's attorney also said it is possible Hastings left the community voluntarily or accidentally fell in the harbor.

Shenandoah Boy Scout Council to Hear Pote

Winchester, Va., Jan. 14 (AP).—Harold F. Pote, personnel director of the National Boy Scout Council, will be principal speaker at the annual dinner meeting of the Shenandoah area council here January 23, Ben. Belchic, chairman of the committee on arrangements, announced today.

The Shenandoah area council embraces Morgan, Berkeley and Jefferson Counties in West Virginia and Frederick, Clarke, Warren, Shenandoah, Page and Rappahannock in Virginia.

Relative Identifies Body Found in River

A body recovered from the Potomac River Monday night by Prince Georges County police was identified yesterday as that of Ernest M. Brown, 48, of 608 Gibbon st., Alexandria, by Mrs. Lillian Jones, an aunt.

Albert Webster, of Webster's Wharf, 7 miles south of Fort Foote, saw the body and directed Upper Marlboro police to it. Dr. James I. Boyd, Prince Georges medical examiner, has not yet issued a death certificate.

Anti-Prohibition Group Chartered in Virginia

Richmond, Va., Jan. 14 (AP).—The State Corporation Commission today issued a charter to a group whose aim is to fight against a possible return of prohibition in Virginia.

Citizens for Temperance Without Prohibition, Incorporated, was granted a charter listing James S. Easley of South Boston as president, and Martha V. Cronly, Nina H. Averey and Ernest H. Dervishian, all of Richmond, as directors.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 14 (AP). Judge D. H. Rodgers today announced the appointment of Albert S. Marshall of Easton, Pa., as official stenographer for the twenty-third West Virginia judicial circuit.

Atom Talk Tonight

Dr. Arthur A. Brown, national chairman of the Atomic Education Association, will address the Groveton (Va.) Parent-Teacher Association tonight at 8:15 in the Groveton School. His subject will be "Education in Atomic Energy."

Appeal to SCC

Va. Phone Firm Hit On Service

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 14 (Spl.).—The Virginia State Corporation Commission will be asked by the Spotsylvania County board of supervisors to revoke the franchise of Rural Telephone, Inc., a small private company serving some parts of the county.

Meeting for the first time since January 1, the supervisors agreed to ask revocation of the company's license on grounds of inadequate service, and to grant its rights to some "reputable" concern. Officials of the commission also will be asked to set a date for a conference with the board of supervisors to discuss the company's services.

The first 1948 meeting of the board, attended by three newly-elected members, was marked by passage of more than a dozen resolutions, among them a recommendation that the State law be changed to provide for election of a school board by popular vote instead of by school trustees.

Other resolutions approved by the board provided for a request that Circuit Court Judge Leon M. Bazile extend the time for filing real estate assessments, originally due December 31; recommended appointment of Douglas Howdershelt, jr., V. G. Dickinson, W. C. Harris and E. A. Haislip to a board to review assessments; opposed adoption by the General Assembly of a proposed State sales tax; ordered reports by County Agent C. W. Henry, Game Warden P. Blake Lewis, Forester Earl Carner and Mrs. L. E. Carver, home demonstration agent; repealed a year-old ordinance banning fireworks in the county and recommended that the State Highway Department surface Route 638 between Routes 2 and 636 and annex the remainder of Route 665 presently not included in the State secondary road system.

The supervisors also set January 21 as the date for a meeting with the school board to discuss a proposed school building program.

A. Miller Arritt, only holdover from the 1947 board, was elected chairman for the current year. New members of the unit are Wilbur B. Wallace, Paul Hilldrup and Buford O. Carr.

Md. State House Repair Bids Vary By Wide Margins

Baltimore, Jan. 14 (AP).—The Gatch Supply Co. of Baltimore, apparently was low today with a bid of $4175 for exterior repairs to the dome of the Maryland State House at Annapolis.

Award of a contract is subject to approval by the board of public works and rechecking of widely different bids submitted by four Baltimore firms.

Wallace-Gale Co. bid $40,990, Colwill Construction Co., $24,634, and Henry A. Knott and Co., Inc., $9438.

The office of John B. Funk, State engineer, offered no explanation for the great range of bids for the work, which includes the replacement of slate shingles, repair of leaks, replacement of guttering and woodwork and painting.

Interior work necessary for overhauling the venerable building's dome will be handled by separate bids and contracts.

Charles Town Bank Adds Three Directors

Charles Town, W. Va., Jan. 14 (Spl.).—Three directors were added to the board of the Bank of Charles Town by the stockholders at their annual meeting here. The new members are J. Burns Huyett, farmer and retired Federal Land Bank appraiser; J. M. Garrott, farmer and president of the Jefferson County Court, and James W. Strider, cashier of the bank.

The Peoples Bank here reelected all its present directors for the year. The board, which organized immediately after the election, renamed all executive officers, with E. E. Furr as president; J. D. Yowell and R. R. McQuilken, vice presidents, and H. W. Willis, cashier and secretary.

Va. Sportsmen Back Proposed Law Changes

Luray, Va., Jan. 14 (Spl.).—Proposed changes in Virginia dog, game and fish laws, recommended in the DeJarnette Committee report, have been indorsed by the Northern Virginia League of Sportsmen's Associations.

The league, which represents 2000 sportsmen in this section of Virginia, elected Col. Roger Parrott, of the Fauquier County Fish and Game Association, as president. Leland H. Pittman, of the Page County Game and Fish Association, was chosen secretary-treasurer.

Prince William County Clinics Open Today

Manassas, Va., Jan. 14 (Spl.).—Three clinics have been scheduled for tomorrow and Friday under auspices of the Prince William County Health Clinic.

A maternal and child health clinic for Negro patients is slated tomorrow at 2 p. m. at the health office. Venereal disease clinics are scheduled for 2 p. m. tomorrow at the Quantico office, and at 4 p. m. in the local headquarters. Examinations will be conducted by Dr. John Williams.

Baltimore Transit Bus Move Approved

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 14 (AP).—The Court of Appeals opened the way today for the Baltimore Transit Co. to change 77 miles of its trolley operations to bus service and ended stockholders' legal opposition to the move.

The high tribunal found, in a unanimous decision, that the company's board of directors had power to make the change without consulting the stockholders.

Former Sub Captain To Run County C. of C.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 14 (AP).—Capt. Earl Richard Morrissey, a retired submarine officer, will take over as executive secretary of the Annapolis and Anne Arundel County Chamber of Commerce Thursday.

The board of directors announced today Morrissey will succeed Willis T. Armbruster, who resigned January 1.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Accepting a Contribution Is Not a Simple Matter

The shortage of funds for the penny milk program in our local schools moved Y. V. to send me $5 and a request that the money be forwarded to the proper authorities.

The contribution threw the City Fathers into a brief tizzy, but this is to report that all has now been straightened out.

The trouble was this: We had to make sure that it was legal for the District to accept the $5.

Ralph T. Scott, secretary to Budget Officer Walter Fowler, finally worked out a solution.

Acting on his advice, I sent a check for $5 to Auditor Bernard A. Harrison. Auditor Harrison will fill out the required forms, and then transmit the $5 to Harry M. Gardner, supervisor of the milk program in the District.

That solved our own small crisis; the larger crisis will be overcome, says District Liner Gardner, when Congress okays the $36,000 deficiency appropriation for which the Commissioners are now asking.

VAGRANT THOUGHT

Regardless of how the next grain crop turns out, Mr. Stassen appears to be reaping a golden harvest.

HOW'S THAT AGAIN?

Our morning contemporary's Tuesday editions indicate that inflation is worse than we thought:

"Average hourly earnings went up from $1249 in September to $1257 in October."

This apparently brings the average weekly wage (for 40 of those luscious hours) up to $50,280, and gives the working man a chance to provide a decent home for his kids.

TREASURER'S REPORT

Streetcar tokens for Children's Hospital have been received from:

H. E. Lofdahl, Arlington, Va.; R. K. Peck, 2026 Hanover st., Silver Spring, Md.; Mrs. Virginia English, 1628 Columbia rd. nw.; E. M. S., 54 Knowles ave., Kensington, Md.; the folks at 4408 Jenifer st. nw., and the sophomore class of the Sidwell Friends School.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Two 4-month-old black kittens." (Shepherd 7865).

"Two brindle kittens, about 6 weeks old." (Dupont 8679.)

"Ten-month-old tan female wire-haired terrier." (Owens 5746.)

"Two pretty little kittens." (Emerson 2443 during day, Wisconsin 1891 at night.)

"Mother cat and four kittens." (Decatur 8868 before 9 a. m. or after 5 p. m.)

"Three-month-old puppy." (Emerson 3564.)

MEMO TO RELIEF GROUPS

There's a large amount of used clothing at Warfield 6502, just begging to be picked up for shipment overseas.

STREET SCENE

Our reporter for this one is Mrs. R. L. Nylund of 2021 Franklin st. ne.:

The pretty young girl got off the streetcar at 14th and G sts. nw., and almost immediately began to cry.

The cop on the corner was Johnny-on-the-spot. She told him her troubles in sentences punctuated with sobs.

She'd left her purse on that streetcar up there.

The policeman sized up the situation at a glance, grabbed the girl's arm, and set off at a dead run.

They caught the streetcar at New York ave. The cop retrieved the purse, and sent the girl on her way beaming.

Then he mopped his brow and went back to G st. to await the next damsel in distress.

PIED TYPE DEPT.

One of our afternoon contemporaries appears to have been greatly upset by the GSI strike. Monday's report said, in part:

"Officials were investigating a report that the husband of a Navy cafeteria rushed into the building this morning and surrendered a revolver to a building guard."

DANGEROUS WEAPON

"Joseph Carter, no fixed address, was struck on the head with a shoe during an argument in a Second Precinct cell. Police charged Archie Smith, jr., of Richmond, Va., with assault with a dangerous weapon. (News item.)

Dime store

To some it is a dime store and . . . To some the 5 and 10 . . . This shop that is so popular . . . With women and with men . . . It offers every item from . . . A hairpin to a dish . . . And all the candy and the gum . . . A customer could wish . . . It used to deal exclusively . . . In nickels and in dimes . . . But that is not by any means . . . The case in modern times . . . Today the merchandise is priced . . . At varying amounts . . . That make us wonder if the place . . . Goes in for charge accounts . . . Indeed the dime store represents . . . The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Thomas Changes Tune on Trading

By Drew Pearson

Senator Elmer Thomas of Oklahoma, faced with an official and irrefutable Agriculture Department list showing his wife to have been speculating in cotton, now righteously bares his breast and invites a full probe of his commodity market dealings.

Senator Thomas

That, however, is a different story from the one he told in May, 1946, when this column first reported: "Senator Thomas' cotton trading has been through Robert Harriss of Harriss & Vose, 60 Beaver st., New York, with the account carried in the name of the Senator's wife, Edith."

At that time Senator Thomas issued a denial. "The only cotton I own," he said, "is on my back."

When newspapermen pressed him for further details and asked whether his wife owned any cotton, Thomas led them to believe that neither he nor his wife had ever been in the cotton market.

Various newspaper demands for an investigation followed, together with demands from inside the Administration by OPA Administrator Chester Bowles. But at that time, Senator Thomas did not bare his breast. Figuring he could outbluff the demands for a probe, he issued a steady drumbeat of denials.

Calling me a chronic liar, he wrote to constituents explaining that he had considered bringing a libel suit against me but decided against it on the ground that I was judgment-proof. He even secured a letter from Harriss & Vose stating that he had not been speculating and flooded the State of Oklahoma with photostat copies of this letter.

At that time Senators Wayne Morris of Oregon and Glen Taylor of Idaho introduced bills requiring Senators to register their commodity-market transactions so the public could have the facts. Senator Thomas, however, did not rush forward either to give the public any facts or to support this bill.

Today, faced with the irrefutable evidence of the Department of Agriculture, Senator Thomas, in a sudden and unusual spurt of frankness, now offers to show his books. He also throws himself on the public's mercy by saying he is a poor man and has to augment his Senatorial salary. The facts, however, do not substantiate this.

About one year ago, the Senator was returning from Europe with his secretary on the S. S. Washington and complained bitterly because the United States Lines did not set him up in the style to which he was accustomed. He wanted a cabin entirely to himself and threatened not to sit at the captain's table unless he got one.

When the United States Lines explained that heavy postwar traffic made this impossible, the Senator from Oklahoma actually sent a radio message to Senator McKellar of Tennessee, then president pro tem of the Senate, demanding an investigation of the United States Lines.

The purser finally offered the Senator his own private cabin and the gentleman from Oklahoma then cooled off.

But the first day on the high seas, Senator Thomas demanded that the ship's newspaper carry a daily listing of the price of cotton. In fact, the Senator made such a point of this that a special radiogram was sent by the S. S. Washington to a vice president of the Radio Corporation of America asking that a daily report on cotton be radioed to the ship.

Thereafter this report was delivered daily to the cabin of the Senator from Oklahoma. At that time the Senator had denied he was in the cotton market at all.

If the Senator's colleagues finally decide to investigate, I shall be glad to supply the names of witnesses who can testify to these and other facts.

To get the full background on Senator Thomas, however, you have to know some of the people around him. These include Ralph Moore, the famous Texas lobbyist, who has made millions since he came to Washington and who is now under investigation by the Justice Department; also Robert Harriss of Harriss and Vose.

Senator Thomas now claims that at no time did he influence the price of cotton. However, it is important to remember that almost anything a Senator says about regulating cotton controls—and this was more than ever so in the days of OPA—is bound to affect the price of cotton. And this is especially true when one is chairman of the powerful Senate Agricultural Committee as was Senator Thomas.

Here is exactly how he operated—and also how he influenced the price of cotton.

Harriss, who handles the Thomas family's cotton-trading account, was in and out of the Senator's office every week or so. They are warm friends. The Thomas purchases never went over 5000 bales, which is the legal limit for cotton, and usually the Thomas trading was through pools which generally ran up to 20,000 bales.

Investigation shows that the Harriss and Vose firm was trading in cotton—and very heavily—between the dates of March 4 and 7, between March 29 and April 4 and between April 8 and 12, all in 1946. Harriss and Vose trading at this time was largely for its customers and the firm was careful to break no market regulations.

But this was exactly when Chester Bowles was proposing controls on cotton and also when the battle against the OPA was getting hot.

Some heavy operations by Harriss and Vose were between March 29 and April 4. On March 28 cotton futures were selling for about 27.40 cents, at which time, according to the Wall Street Journal, "Cotton futures rose $1.35 to $1.85 a bale on a late rush of buying orders stimulated by the possibility that the Pace bill would be adopted by the Senate. The rally was touched off by the plea of Senator Thomas (D., Okla.), for higher farm prices in supporting tacking-on of the Pace measure to the Minimum Wage bill. All futures made 22-year highs."

Cosmopolitan's Male Fashion Jury

with excitement in color and detail

This is the jury: Gene Autry, Toots Mansfield, Dick Griffith, Joe Walsh, Bill McMackin and Carl Dossey.

The scene, as usual, was New York's famed Stork Club. January's Cosmopolitan jury on fashions was headed by Gene Autry, with five other cowboys . . . ten-gallon hats and all! Here are the dresses they picked. They voted for prints, bright and right for spring. They liked picture necklines, pannier draperies and side-swept peplums. In short . . . they liked these. When you see them, here at The Hecht Co. (in Washington and Silver Spring), you'll agree . . . those cowboys know almost as much about fashion as they do about riding the purple sage!
